

Youths Spot Dynamite Plant

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Four boys walking along a Florida East Coast main line railroad track Wednesday night discovered 45 sticks of dynamite hooked to the track and dismantled the wires just minutes before a freight train passed over, police reported.

Criminal agent Leif Larson of the Brevard County sheriff's office reported the dynamite was electrically wired to the track and would have exploded if the engine had contacted the wire.

"If the boys had not taken their quick action, somebody might have been killed," he reported.

The train continued on its northward journey, unaware of its close call.

It was the latest incident during a year-long strike against the railroad.

10-Year-Old Becomes Mother

CHICAGO (AP) — A 10-year-old child, a fourth grader, gave birth by Caesarean section to a 5 pound, 15 ounce girl. Both the mother and the baby were reported in good condition by authorities at St. Bernard's Hospital.

The infant was taken almost immediately to St. Vincent's Orphanage, where she will be cared for until adopted.

Hospital authorities said there is little chance that the mother will ever see the girl. Her physician, Dr. Carlo A. Fioretti, earlier said she had seemed confused by the experience.

The young mother's parents are divorced and she had lived with another family on the South Side. A 16-year-old boy also living with the South Side family was said to be the father. None of the individuals involved have been publicly identified.

U.S. Dist. Judge Charles Scoggin granted Mrs. Ford, 44, a divorce from her 45-year-old husband on the ground of mental anguish. The proceedings lasted 20 minutes.

The divorce followed by a little over six months the formal announcement of the separation of Ford and his wife, the former Anne McDonnell of Southampton, Long Island, N.Y.

Young Sinatra Waits to Appear

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As Frank Sinatra Jr. waited to testify at his kidnapping trial, a pretty Nevada hostess took the stand Wednesday and placed two of the defendants in the Lake Tahoe area at the time of the alleged abduction last Dec. 8.

So lengthy was the testimony of Miss Vera Petrovitch that young Sinatra was not called. He is expected to testify Thursday.

The government charges the 19-year-old singing scion of the famed star was kidnapped at gunpoint by Barry W. Keenan, 23, and Joseph Amsler, 23. A third defendant, John Irwin, 42, the government alleges, later took part in the kidnapping and ransom demand for $240,000.

Navy Ignores Cuban Water

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Cubans turned on the water Tuesday in pipes leading to Guantanamo, but the Navy said the base kept its valves closed and accepted no delivery.

At 9 a.m. Tuesday, pressure on a 10-inch pipe leading to the base jumped from nine pounds per square inch to 47 pounds, the Navy said Wednesday. Later the pressure dropped again, indicating the pumping had stopped from the Cuban side.

Teacher Admonished For Hitting Student

BRODHEADSVILLE — Pleasant Valley Joint School Committee last night voted to admonish Roger Arnold, a teacher, for "intemperate action" and to tell all teachers in the jointure that the committee opposes corporal punishment.

The action was taken after the committee was told by Duane Hubbard, a pupil, that Roger Arnold, a teacher in the Folk Twp. Elementary School, last Friday struck him three times in the face.

Elwood Hubbard, the father, told The Daily Record last night that he has filed charges of assault and battery, on information given to Justice of the Peace Floyd Kellogg in Stroudsburg by his son.

Arnold will be given a hearing Tuesday at 4 p.m. in Kellogg's office.

Two of the blows were across the mouth and were delivered by an open hand; the third blow, with the back of the hand, caused a black eye, Harry T. Young, assistant superintendent of Pleasant Valley Joint Schools in charge of elementary education, told the meeting last night.

Mrs. Elwood Hubbard and her son, Duane, were asked by the committee, to tell what happened in the classroom.

Duane told the meeting, "Last Friday we were studying from The Reader's Digest. During the lesson Mr. Arnold said a house burns up and I said it doesn't burn up it burns down. He hit me with his hand. This happened again and he hit me again."

"The third time I said a house burns down, not up. He (Arnold) said, 'Are you calling me a liar?' and he hit me the third time," the student said.

The committee questioned Young and asked for information he had received about the incident.

Young said, "First, it is my feeling and my policy that no teacher should hit a child around the face or head, but if the child needs a spanking, the teacher should send the child to me and I'll do it."

"Mr. Hubbard has been at my home but not too much was accomplished. I told him that I would not see Mr. Arnold on Saturday or Sunday but on Monday morning, before school began, I would talk to Mr. Arnold about the matter," he said.

Young continued, "I spoke to Mr. Arnold and he admitted striking the boy. At this time I told him in no uncertain words and terms that he should never again touch any child in his class to punish them."

"I also spoke to Mrs. Hubbard and we decided that Arnold would pay for part of the doctor bill. I suggested that he pay the entire bill, but she said that would not be necessary as the treatment also included penicillin shots. It was Mrs. Hubbard who suggested Arnold pay half the costs. When we left, I thought the entire matter was taken care of. Then I learned that formal charges had been placed against Mr. Arnold by Mr. Hubbard."

Mrs. Hubbard told the meeting that the part about her conversation with Young was true.

When asked if she thought Mr. Hubbard would drop the charges of assault and battery she replied, "I'm only half of our family and I cannot answer for my husband."

John Mills, superintendent of the jointure, asked Mrs. Hubbard if she thought a meeting with her husband, herself, Young and himself (Mills) could be arranged. She replied, "I'm not sure, but I will ask him."

Mills then said, "Well, Mr. Young and myself will be at the school tomorrow morning and will be available for a meeting. We will be at the school from 7:30 a.m. on. If this time is not convenient with your husband, if he will contact me we will set up another time and place. I would like very much to have the meeting before the hearing on Tuesday. Perhaps we can join the matter out to a mutual agreement and Mr. Hubbard will drop the charge."

He added, "I would like to say what is in me, what I think. The action, if carried out, will affect Mr. Arnold the rest of his life. He will be unable to teach in this state and the penalty has a minimum of $1,000 fine and up to two years in jail. This sentence can be of lesser amount and time depending on the court."

"I feel that Mr. Arnold has suffered much from this trouble. I feel that it is a lesson that will remain with him until he reaches 80, if he teaches that long. I also feel that it is unfair to him to have this action taken against him, but under no circumstances do I want it understood that I approve his actions," he concluded.

No Halt Foreseen In Anglo-Cuban Trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson and British Prime Minister Sir Alec Douglas-Home opened a two-day exploration of world issues Wednesday and quickly ended up in opposing camps on curtailing trade with Communist Cuba.

Diplomatic informants, reporting this, said Sir Alec made it clear Britain has no intention of joining the United States in holding down commerce in non-strategic goods with Cuba.

Johnson, the informants said, forcefully restated the U.S. position that the Western Allies must find a formula harmonizing their attitudes toward the Communist world.

The differing stands on Cuba were no surprise and the two heads of government quickly agreed on the need to continue and speed up efforts to reach agreement with the Soviet Union on the central issues of Germany and Berlin. The informants said. Instructions were issued to seek a new Western approach.

Officially, Johnson and Douglas-Home were reported to have dug into the problems of Cyprus, Southeast Asia, Cuba and East-West relations.

Pierre Salinger, White House press secretary, singled out those subjects as among the ones dealt with by the two heads of government, but disclosed no details.

part of Harris' testimony. Williams carefully reconstructed instances when Harris went on the radio to fight for issues he wanted to accomplish.

After Harris had admitted he went on the air to speak against the Stroudsburg Water Authority's purchase of the borough's privately owned water system in 1956, Williams said: "In 1961 did you not have the same opportunity to go on the radio and refute the advertisement?"

Harris answered: "Of course I did but the charges were so ridiculous and unbelievable."

Catches Himself
Harris caught himself and stopped at that point.

Williams shot back, "So you did not think it was worth the trouble because it was so ridiculous and unbelievable?"

"Correct," Harris said.

Williams then probed in detail the manner Harris used in turning over fines he collected on behalf of the borough.

Williams showed that on several occasions The Stroudsburg Council discussed the problem of Harris' refusal to promptly turn over to the borough treasury money collected from fines

Guantanamo Goes Military, Wives, Children To Leave

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is going to turn the Guantanamo Naval Base into a strictly military garrison with no wives, children or other dependents.

The Defense Department said Wednesday that families will be withdrawn gradually over the next two years in line with President Johnson's decision to put the Cuban base on a self-sufficient footing.

"Dependents now on station will be returned to the United States at the normal expiration of their sponsors' regular tours of duty," Asst. Secretary of Defense Arthur Sylvester said.

"Since all military tours presently are for a period of two years, and no extensions will be granted to persons with dependents on station, there will probably be no dependents remaining on the base by early 1966."

No more families either of military personnel or of civilian employees will be sent to the base, which is now under forced water rationing as a result of Prime Minister Fidel Castro's order cutting off the normal supply.

Water Allowance Reduced
The water allowance for the 10,500 people on the base—Navy and Marine personnel, civilian workers, and their families—was reduced to one-fourth of the usual supply after last Thursday's shut-off.

Of the total number on the base, about 3,000 are listed as dependents.

Their gradual removal was described by Sylvester as "a further step in the process of making the Guantanamo Naval Base entirely self-sufficient, and to improve the garrison posture of the forces there."

Better Prepared
He told a news conference that the decision to end family-type living on the base will make Guantanamo "a little more ready."

Actually it will make it more of a forward outpost than South Korea or South Viet Nam. Some dependents are allowed to accompany military men to both of these places, and there are no family restrictions at all on military assignments to Communist-encircled West Berlin.

Sylvester announced that military tours at Guantanamo will be reduced to one year or less in the future, instead of the present two years, "as has been done in the past for unaccompanied military personnel at remote bases." This is intended to minimize the time of family separations.

Several Hundred Fired
Sylvester also announced that the decision to reduce the 3,000-man force of Cuban nationals employed at the base has resulted in the discharge of several hundred of these workers thus far.

He said he did not know how many more will be fired in a retaliatory move which has two main purposes:

1. To reduce the flow of dollars—estimated at $6.1 million a year — being paid to workers who return to Castro's Cuba to spend the money; and,

2. To make Guantanamo more self-sufficient and less open to further harassment by Castro.

Sylvester said there is a possibility that more U.S. civilians or military personnel may be sent to Guantanamo to replace the ousted Cubans, but he added that a very close look will be taken to see if the slack cannot be taken up by persons already on the base.

Havana newspapers have taken up a charge by Castro that the United States has stopped paying pensions to retired Guantanamo Bay workers. They said the Cuban government has decided to start paying the pensions.

Castro said last week that, "There are some Cubans who had worked all their lives in the Guantanamo base and were pensioned by the American government. That government has suspended payment to those pensioners if they do not live in the United States and if they do not leave Cuba."

Makarios Turns Down Peace Force

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — President Archbishop Makarios has turned down a new British-American plan for stationing an international peace-keeping force on Cyprus, an authoritative Greek Cypriot source said Wednesday night.

Fighting raged in the island's second largest city, the south coast port of Limassol, while U.S. Undersecretary of State George W. Ball talked with leaders of the feuding Greek and Turkish-speaking factions. Four persons were reported killed and nine wounded on both sides before the British truce force arranged a cease-fire.

Makarios made clear his opposition to the plan after two meetings with Ball, the Greek Cypriot source said.

American sources said that Ball would meet again with Makarios on Thursday. They added it was hoped that Makarios could be persuaded to accept the plan. Ball originally had been scheduled to leave on Wednesday night.

One U.S. source said the U.S. government wants to help but the same time "it does not want to shoehorn itself into Cyprus."

Beatles Raise Roof

NEW YORK (AP) — The Beatles, the long-haired musicians whose music is not, tore the roof off Carnegie Hall on Wednesday night.

The appearance of the mop-headed British quartet on the venerable concert hall stage set off a crescendo of teen-age squeals that could almost be heard across the river in New Jersey.

And the Beatles, who play and sing a violent form of rock 'n' roll, may actually have been playing and singing. The audience couldn't tell. All it heard most of the time was its own screaming.

The concert, which began 45 minutes late, climaxed a day of near riots, a day in which a strange and violent maelstrom spread over midtown Manhattan. It infected thousands of teenagers and created daylong bedlam at three of the city's landmarks.

The victims, who moved about the city in locust-like swarms, displayed common symptoms: hysteria, inability to stay behind police barriers, and a peculiar pain which led them to scream continuously: "We want the Beatles."

"They swarmed and screamed at Carnegie Hall, then at the Hotel Plaza, and at Pennsylvania Station.

The disease was helped along by a school holiday for Lincoln's Birthday.

Reds Blame Swiss Police For Nosenko's Defection

GENEVA (AP) — The Soviet Union charged Wednesday that Yuri I. Nosenko, an expert on the Soviet disarmament delegation here, had been lured to the West by agents using "provocative activity."

The chief Soviet delegate blamed Switzerland for loose security and demanded that the Swiss get Nosenko back.

Swiss reaction was sharp. Rene Helg, president of the Geneva cantonal (state) government, called the Soviet statements "unfounded, unjust and unjust." He charged the Russians failed to cooperate with Swiss police in the matter and even actively hindered police work.

Another Swiss called the Soviet statements "sour grapes."

The State Department announced Monday that the 36-year-old Russian, identified as an officer of the top Soviet security agency called KGB, had requested political asylum in the United States. He disappeared from sight here eight days ago.

The Soviet chief delegate, Semyon K. Tsarapkin, declared Wednesday that Nosenko's defection could be blamed on the "provocative activity" of Western intelligence agencies and constituted a violation of Swiss sovereignty.

In a statement read to reporters, Tsarapkin called on the Swiss government to demand that Nosenko be returned to Geneva and handed over to the Soviet delegation.

Swiss Foreign Minister Friedrich Wahlen immediately summoned Soviet Ambassador Alexander Loebtchakov to the federal government building in Bern and handed him a stiff protest against Tsarapkin's remarks.

Swiss officials said disarmament delegates are free to come and go as they please and could not expect to be "nursed" by Swiss police. One Swiss source described Tsarapkin's statement as "an absurd case of sour grapes."

Mrs. Oswald Says Lee Was U. S. Agent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs. Marguerite Oswald said Wednesday she told the Warren commission she believes her son was a U.S. intelligence agent who was "set up to take the blame" for President John F. Kennedy's assassination. She said she believes her son was innocent.

The 56-year-old mother of Lee Harvey Oswald finished three days of testimony in the presidential investigating commission. Then she held an impromptu news conference in which she acknowledged—despite her belief in his innocence—that:

"I realize that as a human being he could be guilty."

But she said she possesses "pertinent evidence" leading her to believe the assassin is still at large.

Pope Urges Fight Against Lewdness

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI called on priests of the Roman Catholic Church this Ash Wednesday to fight lewdness and spiritual confusion in today's world.

His forehead marked with the gray ash cross for the start of Lent, the pontiff said that if antireligious ideas should prevail "it would be the ruin of freedom and perhaps of prosperity."

The Pope spoke to 300 preachers of Roman churches assembled in the Sistine Chapel. He told them that modern life has become characterized by doubts, scandals and spiritual confusion.

Harris Takes Stand, Boasts Of Career As Burgess

By GIL MURRAY
Daily Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Hal. H. Harris, flamboyant ex-chief burgess of Stroudsburg, took the stand yesterday in his civil libel suit against Mayor Joseph M. Small and in rapid-fire boasted of his many accomplishments during 22 years in office.

Small testified that he had no intention of harming Harris' reputation with a political advertisement he published in The 1961.

Atty. Kennard Lewis, counsel for Harris, rested the plaintiff's case at noon.

The trial will enter its third day this morning at 9:30 a.m. with the cross examination of Harold B. Snyder, borough manager, who was on the stand as a defense witness when court adjourned yesterday.

Wayne County President Judge James B. Rutherford is presiding before a jury of six women and six men.

The suit stems from the advertisement which Harris contends damaged his reputation and contributed to his defeat in his 1961 mayoralty race with Small. Harris seeks damages in excess of $5,000.

The advertisement appeared in the paper Nov. 4, 1961, three days before the election, and read:

"Yes, $100,000 is a lot of money, but it took George Robinson and a judgement in Monroe Court to collect it! Think . . . then vote Joe Small for mayor of Stroudsburg."

During Harris' testimony, which at times was too rapid for the court stenographer to record, he said he was selected by the Associated Press in 1946 as the outstanding small town mayor in America.

Harris, under intense cross examination by Atty. Phillip Williams, said he withheld $1,469 in fines from the borough council in 1946, but said he did so because council had refused to pay him his salary for 16 months.

On direct examination the former burgess said during his tenure in office the first sewage plant in the nation financed with a federal grant was built in Stroudsburg in 1936.

Other major accomplishments he noted during his two hours on the stand were:

The paving of 45 blocks of permanent streets in central Stroudsburg without any additional tax to residents.

The Pocono flood control project and the installation of borough parking meters in 1938.

Under the probing questions of Lewis, Harris said, "I first saw the ad Saturday at 7 a.m. and took it to mean that Robinson (George T. Robinson, borough solicitor had obtained a judgment and collected $100,000. He said he was unable to refuse the advertisement because The Daily Record's advertising copy deadline for the Tuesday election day paper was Friday — the day before Small's advertisement appeared in the paper."

"The ad had a definite effect on the younger class of voters below the age of 35, because the younger voters did not know about these accomplishments," he said.

The contention that a $100,000 judgment was ever filed against him was a "base falsehood," he said.

Asked by Lewis how the advertisement affected him, Harris replied, "It is always nauseating to see something untrue about you."

The direct questioning of Harris came to an end when he said the advertisement had a "nervous effect" on his health.

Williams then proceeded to draw out the most damaging part of Harris' testimony. Williams carefully reconstructed instances when Harris went on the radio to fight for issues he wanted to accomplish.

After Harris had admitted he went on the air to speak against the Stroudsburg Water Authority's purchase of the borough's privately owned water system in 1956, Williams said: "In 1961 did you not have the same opportunity to go on the radio and refute the advertisement?"

Harris answered: "Of course I did but the charges were so ridiculous and unbelievable."

Catches Himself
Harris caught himself and stopped at that point.

Williams shot back, "So you did not think it was worth the trouble because it was so ridiculous and unbelievable?"

"Correct," Harris said.

time was because the council refused to pay his salary.

He said he had to take a salary dispute to the state Superior Court in Scranton, where he was successful in his suit to collect. The salary amounted to "about $250," he said.

Williams, who is associated with the law firm of Bensinger and Bensinger, Small's counsel, then gave the defense's opening remarks to the jury.

"We will show the background of this ad. It was placed after investigation and in reasonable and proper circumstances," he said.

With Small on the stand the defense introduced copies of borough audits which showed Harris was delinquent in turning in fine monies.

They showed Harris was delinquent in 1937-38-39-40-41-43-44. The most he was delinquent in any one year was $750 according to the evidence introduced.

Lewis withdrew an objection to the audits when Judge Rutherford told the jury that all year-end balances were paid by Harris before a new balance was incurred.

Small testified before he placed the advertisement he went to the Courthouse with Atty. Charles R. Bensinger and checked he annual borough audits.

"I was trying to bring out to the people more about my opponent," he said.

Asked why he put the advertisement in the paper, Small said, "Because I wanted the people to know exactly what was going on and not a lot of double talk."

He said he placed the advertisement to refute the earlier one claiming Harris turned over more than $100,000 to the borough.

"I wanted to inform the people that we were not disputing the amount and this was a lot of money but it took George Robinson and a judgement to break up his (Harris') withholding money," Small said.

Asked by Williams if the advertisement was intended to embarrass Harris, cause him financial loss or as a motive for revenge, Small answered, "No."

Under cross examination Small said he chose Nov. 4 for the advertisement because it was an answer to Harris' earlier advertisement.

He said the $100,000 in his advertisement "all relates back to the $100,000 he was talking about."

Members of the jury are Minerva Gould, East Stroudsburg; Frank Cracoli, East Stroudsburg; Frank B. Miller, Middlefield; Hans Christian Nielsen, Middlefield; Sarah Young, Stroudsburg; Marie C. Borden, South Hamilton; Hilda R. Smith, East Stroudsburg; Helen A. McBride, Middlefield; Stephen Nesko, Mt. Pocono; Ethel Kammel, Polk; Ralph J. VanWay, Eastern Middlefield; and Elmer Ross, Ross.

Death Victim Named In Estate

READING, Pa. (AP) — A former beauty contestant has left more than half of her estate to a nine-year-old boy whom authorities say she accidentally killed while taking her own life by carbon monoxide poisoning.

The will, filed Tuesday in the Berks County Courthouse, listed the personal property of Mrs. John U. Reber, of Wyomissing, at more than $50,000 and real estate valued at $57,000.

The will provided that her two sons receive equal shares of her estate and also that of her late husband, a New York advertising executive who died nine years ago.

The lone survivor is her son, Richard, 14, attending military school in Baltimore.

Mrs. Reber, Miss New York City in the 1943 Miss America Pageant, was found dead in her home last week, along with her other son, Christopher Jr.

Johnson To Get Kennedy Coins

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The first new half dollars bearing the likeness of the late President John F. Kennedy were struck Tuesday at simultaneous ceremonies at the Philadelphia and Denver mints.

At a telephone signal given in Philadelphia and heard in Denver, four new silver coins were stamped out at each mint.

Eva Adams, director of the mint, who came here from Washington for the ceremony, said the eight coins will be given to President Johnson, who will pass them on to Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy and her children, Caroline and John.

The face of the coin bears a portrait of President Kennedy, facing left. On the reverse there is a replica of the presidential coat of arms and an eagle holding an olive branch in its claw.

During this year, the mint will produce 90 million of them to replace the Franklin D. Roosevelt half dollar which was first minted in 1948.

When 25 million of them are made, they will be distributed to banks throughout the country and released to the public in late March or April.

Health Dept. Probe Urged

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Four Republican representatives Tuesday sought a legislative investigation of the state Health Department's personnel policies.

The group introduced a resolution contending the department's appointment and promotion methods "make a farce of the civil service system" which covers most workers in the big agency.

The resolution calls for creation of a six-member committee composed of three senators and three assemblymen, armed with subpoena powers, to handle the inquiry. It would determine "if proper methods are being used in the employment and promotion of personnel."

Sponsors were Reps. W. Max Bossert, Clinton; Ralph A. Marsh, Clearfield; John Cavanaugh, Susquehanna; and Annin A. Alley, Columbia.

Last week an aide accompanied the prominent lawyer everywhere.

President questioning as to the aide's duties finally brought the truth from Mr. Donovan. The aide is a plain clothes detective assigned to body guard duties because the school board president received threatening phone calls and letters from negroes who are impatient with the metropolitan city's efforts to halt the "racial imbalance" they feel prevalent in city schools.

Mrs. Sonja McNeil of Reno, won first prize in a contest for hunters' wives.

She managed to win groceries that would have cost $673.73. The frantic shopper admitted that she tired in the stretch.

Seranton's Requests On Jobless Bill

HARRISBURG (AP) — Here is a summary of Gov. Seranton's proposed changes in the Pennsylvania Unemployment Compensation Law:

Payroll taxes:

Boost the tax base from $3,000 to $3,600 per employee. An estimated 30,000 employers with minimum labor turnover would have their payroll tax rate reduced from 2 per cent to 1 per cent.

For new employers, the tax rate would be 2.7 per cent for the first two years, instead of the maximum 4 per cent.

The resulting effect of these payroll tax changes would be a net increase of $35 million to the unemployment compensation fund.

Benefit changes:

A second year of benefit payments, the so-called "double dip," would be virtually eliminated.

Any benefits would be limited to 50 per cent of the base year wages.

The number of weeks of previous employment required would have to be greater for benefits below the maximum.

Payments to pensioners would be offset dollar for dollar by company - paid pensions and on a 50 per cent basis for Social Security payments.

Payments below $15 a week would be eliminated.

Maximum weekly benefits would be raised from $40 to $45.

The net effect on benefit changes is to reduce the cost of benefits by about $35 million a year.

Under the new program, the Seranton administration estimated that 45,000 people now eligible for benefits would be denied them. Another 67,000 would face reduced benefits. For 135,000 there would be no change. And for an estimated 203,000 there would be an increase in benefits.

U. S. 'Beloved' Johnson Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson said Tuesday that we are a much beloved people throughout the world — "regardless of what some of the bellyachers say."

The President conceded that this nation has problems in the world, but he said that he has seen times "when the skies were grayer," and "we cannot expect to wash a button and have our wishes carried out all over this globe."

"All we can do is expect to do what is right, what is honorable, what is enlightened, and that we are doing."

Ludovic Kennedy, a British television commentator, wants to write a book on Dr. Stephen Ward, the man who threw the British into a turmoil when his exploits at pandering were brought to light last year. The television announcer feels that with names like Christine Keeler and Mandy Rice Davis, his book ought to be a best seller.

But when Kennedy tried to get the transcript of the trial he struck a stone wall.

Seems in England, trial transcripts are not the property of the public.

This ruling is once again throwing the British in a turmoil. There are many who honestly feel that the records should be made public, and there are those who want to read Mr. Kennedy's book.

His program, laid down in a speech Tuesday before a joint assembly of the State Legislature, seemed certain to wreck bipartisan support in the legislature and alienate labor.

He told the lawmakers that the unemployment compensation fund was in danger of going bankrupt. He referred to those opposing reform as "sunshine patriots" and "demagogues."

WHIRLY PEEPERS?

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The president of the greater Miami Beach Motel Association complained that sight-seeing helicopters were deliberately flying low over motel solariums "to the embarrassment of guests."

Scranton took office 13 months ago.

Not A Candidate

During that period, Scranton has emerged as a talk-about possibility for the Republican presidential nomination. He has said repeatedly he is not a candidate.

The tenor of Republican legislative comment on his speech:

It was a courageous speech. The governor laid it on the line.

Labor generally was critical; but management organizations spoke in praise.

During the afternoon, there was a picketing demonstration by about 100 placard carrying union members, mostly women, in front of Harrisburg local headquarters of the Department of Employment Security.

Pennsylvania's unemployment compensation fund is in debt to the federal government for $167 million.

Scranton must work with thin margins in both houses. Republicans have 108 to 99 Democrats in the House; and 26 senators to 23 Democrats.

Scranton Risks Presidential Stature

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania's Gov. William W. Scranton has risked his blossoming presidential stature and the prestige of his office in a sharp attack on the state's unemployment compensation laws.

Amid all the talk about his qualifications as a Republican presidential nominee, the 46-year-old governor demanded a $35-million-a-year increase in payroll taxes and an equal reduction in benefits to replenish the state's unemployment compensation reserve fund.

His program, laid down in a speech Tuesday before a joint assembly of the State Legislature, seemed certain to wreck bipartisan support in the legislature and alienate labor.

He told the lawmakers that the unemployment compensation fund was in danger of going bankrupt. He referred to those opposing reform as "sunshine patriots" and "demagogues."

JESUS ENTERS JERICHO

The little man in the sycamore tree was a rich and rather infamous person in Jericho. He was Zacchaeus, chief among the town's publicans. Hearing that Jesus was coming on His last, momentous journey to Jerusalem, he had climbed up for a better view.

"Zacchaeus, make haste and come down," Jesus called out to him, "for today I must abide at thy house."

The crowd murmured about Jesus staying at the house of a sinner, but He used the opportunity to show He had come to save all mankind.

"This day is salvation come to this house," He said, "forasmuch as he also is a son of Abraham. For the Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." (Luke XIX:9-10)

GOP Women's Questions Loaded But Answers Duds

By Bobby Westbrook
Family Page Editor

STROUDSBURG — The fire-works, which might be expected when the Monroe Council of Republican Women in effect called the two Republican County Commissioners and the Chairman of the Republican County Committee on the carpet, failed to materialize.

For one thing, only two of the three officials showed up. Stanley Rader, second Republican member of the board of County Commissioners, was not present.

For another, John Price, also a county commissioner, and Harold Kresge, county chairman, were remarkably amicable and full of the increasing harmony they predicted for the party.

Nevertheless the council laid its questions on the line:

"You say that you are not politicians and are serving not the party but all the people of the county; then how does it happen that you appoint to office the very people that the people of the county voted out?"

"How can we get back to a regularly elected Republican County Chairman?"

These were two of the key questions. Mrs. John Gebbie, council president, explained carefully before the meeting that the purpose was not to stir up more dissension.

"There has been too much dissension now," she said. "This is an educational program. There are a few things we want to find out and the best way is to ask the people responsible."

Mrs. Richard Altomose introduced Price and Kresge and, without preliminary speeches, the questions began, both prepared questions and those from the floor.

What the council got was a prediction that things would go more smoothly in the future with a growing harmony on the board of commissioners from Price, and the background of the appointment of Kresge as county chairman.

What the council did not get was any indication that the Democratic appointments they were questioning would be rescinded, or that any definite action was now being planned to review the by-laws of the Republican County Committee to provide for the election of the county chairman by popular vote instead of by the vote of the committee men and women of the county committee.

Kresge pointed out that any 15 members of the Republican County Committee could have called a meeting to vote on revision of the by-laws but they had not done so. Even were they to revise the by-laws now, it would be too late for the coming elections.

His own post as county chairman had not been officially recognized by the county board of election until Jan. 6, 1964, he said, although he had served in that capacity since the party split.

"I have never been elected as county chairman or sought that post," he admitted. "I was elected State Committeeman, and it was as state committeeman that I accepted the responsibility of picking up the shreds after the split developed with two contenders claiming the county chairmanship."

"I have done the best I could and since then we have won three elections," he added in defense.

John Price, in defense of the appointment of Democrats to county posts when Republicans had the majority vote, pointed out that the appointments had been made in the early days of the administration.

Under Pressure

"I'll admit that we may have acted too hastily," he said, "but remember that we were under pressure from all angles," comforting them with the prediction that there is a growing harmony among the commissioners.

He also said that the commissioners were being criticized for some patronage matters which were not their responsibility but of the state organization.

He urged members of the council to attend the meetings of the county commissioners to see for themselves the complexity of the problems they are facing quite apart from the problems of political appointments.

The meeting also gave council members a chance to ask many other questions which have been bothering them:

"Why was the salary of the county solicitor raised to the point where he can hire the former solicitor to do county work?"

Ans: "The former solicitor is only working on cases still pending from the previous administration.

"Does money for pensions for county employees come from the taxpayer's pocket?"

Half-Half

Ans: Half of it comes from county funds, the other half from the employee.

"Who does the housekeeping at the courthouse, and why is it so dirty?"

Ans: "The current construction in the basement creates a lot of dust as you housewives realize when you're having repairs done at home."

Ending on this amicable note, the meeting was followed by tea and sandwiches served from a table decorated with a miniature version of Lincoln's log cabin; Washington's cherry tree, and valentines. Mrs. Eli Travis, Mrs. Fred Davis, Mrs. Foster Minnich, Mrs. Edward Kenney, Mrs. Vernon Eilenberger and Mrs. Gebbie were hostesses.

Mrs. T. E. Terrill opened the meeting with prayer. Five new members were welcomed: Mrs.

Stewart Lee, Mrs. Phillip H. Williams, Mrs. Samuel W. Van Auken, Mrs. Forrest B. Sebring, and Mrs. Raymond A. Roberts.

The proposed revision of council by-laws were read and will be acted upon at the next meeting.

Though the Chinese ruled all of Viet Nam for 1,000 years, the Vietnamese retained a remarkable cultural unity and national identity.

Senator Scott

U. S. Senator Hugh Scott announced his candidacy for re-election Monday just in time to start campaigning at Lincoln Day dinners across the state.

He will speak at the Lincoln Day dinner sponsored by the Republican Party of Monroe County tonight at the Penn-Stroud Hotel.

The master politician and compromiser will come to a county which split down the middle when he was elected senator in 1958.

Scott lost Monroe County to George M. Leader, his Democratic opponent by only 30 votes. The tally was Leader—7,083 and Scott—7,053. Scott won the state-wide race by 112,765 votes.

He has recently won headlines as a member of the Senate Rules Committee investigating the operations of Robert G. Baker, former secretary to the Senate Democratic majority which has uncovered some unflattering stories about another master politician — President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Scott has a liberal Republican voting record. In a Congressional Quarterly summary of major votes he was recorded as voting with Joseph Clark, Democratic senator from Pennsylvania, on seven of 11 major issues in the 1963 Congressional session.

He voted for the test ban treaty, restoration of space funds, the $11.6 billion tax cut, more funds for the Area Redevelopment Administration which helped Camelback Ski Corp. bring a ski boom to the Poconos, and mass transportation aid.

He said in his announcement for re-election Monday that a politician can argue with his opponents without being bitter and can disagree without being disagreeable.

He promised a campaign against Supreme Court Judge Michael Musmanno, the Democratic candidate, without "the bitterness of unreasonable partisanship."

We like that attitude, if he sticks to it. The senator is also known as a tough political fighter. And we like most of his voting record. It is a long time from now to election day, but Senator Scott appears to have better than even chance of keeping his seat in Washington.

Tax Agents In Trouble

It was inevitable that agents of the Pennsylvania Sales and Use Tax Bureau who have attempted to force Pennsylvania residents shopping in New Jersey to pay the state use tax would get into trouble.

They did Tuesday. Robert Frederick, Warren County, New Jersey, prosecutor, warned that Pennsylvania tax agents found harassing customers in New Jersey might be arrested as "disorderly persons."

He said the tax agents were stopping Pennsylvania shoppers in a Phillipsburg, N. J., shopping center across the bridge from Easton, Pa., and were asking them to show their purchases.

The use tax is supposed to be paid on all taxable out-of-state purchases just as the sales tax is paid on purchases within Pennsylvania.

Joseph Gold, director of the Sales Use Tax Bureau in Pennsylvania, answered that the charge of harassing Pennsylvania shoppers in New Jersey was "completely false."

However, Gold reported recently that after tax agents had checked Pennsylvania shoppers in many border areas they raised only $3,500 in tax money from 3,000 Pennsylvania residents.

That made the campaign a waste of money already paid in taxes by Pennsylvania residents.

Obviously, this tax collecting campaign is not only financially unrewarding for Pennsylvania. It is also bad interstate manners.

Comment Of The Day

"The one matter which really was of concern to him and truly had meaning and made that time much more fearful than it would otherwise have been, was the specter of death of the children of this country and around the world—the younger people who had no part and knew nothing of the confrontation, but whose lives would be snuffed out like everyone else's."

—Robert F. Kennedy, writing about his brother, John F. Kennedy, late President of the United States, during the Cuban missile crisis of 1962. The comment is part of a foreword by Robert Kennedy to a new edition of "Profiles In Courage," written by the late President.

The Pennsylvania Story

By Mason Denison
HARRISBURG — The battle shaping up on Capitol Hill has all the earmarks of a donnybrook that threatens to eclipse the legislative rumpus room scraps of the late 1950's, and more recently, the legislative scuffles during the Leader Administration.

This somewhat rocky road for events during the next month or two on Capitol Hill was clearly pinpointed this week by Governor Scranton when he convened the Legislature in special session.

Basically, to rewrite Pennsylvania's unemployment compensation program for jobless workers of the Keystone State.

In essence this all boils down to the simple ideological fact that the Scranton Administration and industry in Pennsylvania are joined in a fight to "tighten" the jobless pay program.

Organized labor and a coalition of supporting Democrats are gliding to oppose the administration proposals.

When the UC scramble approaches a legislative head, it is likely Pennsylvanians will witness another "labor march on Capitol Hill" in protest — an event always embarrassing and irking to any administration.

Hardly an administration has gone by lately though that hasn't had a "march" of one kind or another.

Some idea of the battle now abuilding can be gleaned from the fact that both the administration and organized labor have formulated battle plans to take the issue into the hustings — to the people themselves.

Ere long you'll find Governor Scranton and top administration aides beating the bushes via radio, television, mimeographed statements and group speeches urging support of the administration UC revision proposals.

Organized labor has already launched its opposition drive. Pennsylvania President Harry Boyer in a letter to lawmakers a fortnight ago, concluded with this thought:

"It is hoped that you will consider and agree that amendments that are so severe and harsh for so many in your own area and everywhere else in the state, do not merit your approval and that this bill should not become law."

There is a touch of irony though in labor's opposition to changes in the UC program; they're talking about "how" other people's money should be spent in their behalf!

Pennsylvania employees pay the entire bill — Labor pays in nothing, not even via the oftines remote and nebulous "taxpayer contribution" system!

To "what" is labor opposed in the UC revision program? Fundamentally, and without wasting pages of useless verbiage as has already been done, there are three main points of opposition:

(1) — Revision of but not completely eliminating the "double dip" feature of the present program which allows claimants who retire at certain times during the year to get in a full-blown second round the next calendar year;

(2) — Eliminate pensioners as claimants, many of whom wind up with higher take-home pay in the first year of retirement than in last year as full time wage earners;

(3) — Eliminate payments to "casual" workers not dependent upon employment for their livelihood, largely non-breadwinners.

On the other hand, labor is not complaining about raising top benefits from $40 to $45 weekly and raising minimums from $10 to $15 weekly, nor is labor complaining about increasing the taxable wage base on which employers pay into the UC fund, from $3,000 to $3,600.

In this, an election year when lawmakers' seats are up for grabs, the Governor couldn't have picked a more controversial or fiery subject if he had thought about it for ten years!

The Allen-Scott Report

Castro Baiting

Robert S. Allen

WASHINGTON — Communist dictator Fidel Castro's provocative flouting and baiting of the U. S. is to be duplicated right here in this country.

A pro-Castro organization calling itself the Emergency Committee for Disaster Relief to Cuba is organizing a series of rallies throughout the U. S. with the following objectives:

(1) To raise funds to aid the Soviet puppet regime.
(2) To provide it with shipments of food, medical and other supplies.
(3) To upset the ban on travel to this Red satellite, and send a delegation of the so-called Emergency Committee there.
(4) To circumvent the U. S.

government's economic blockade by transporting supplies by chartered planes instead of freighters.

A rally speaker for this organization is Mark Lane, attorney for Mrs. Margaret Oswald, mother of Lee Harvey Oswald.

Lane is to address the New York rally. Other slated speakers are Ruth Gage Colby, leader of an international women's peace movement; Thomas E. Kolgan, Friends Service Committee; Philip A. Luce, listed as "spokesman for students' recent trip to Cuba."

Congressional investigators have been informed that the Emergency Committee is an offspring of the Fair Play for Cuba Organization. This outfit was disbanded following the assassination of President Kennedy. The probes have been told that FPCC members were advised by its leaders to join other pro-Castro organizations.

A number of sponsors of the Emergency Committee were active in the FPCC. Lee Harvey Oswald reportedly sought to join that organization. He was arrested in New Orleans for distributing its pro-Castro literature.

What They're Up To — Official government files list a number of the sponsors of the Emergency Committee as Communists and fellow travelers.

One sponsor is a well-known writer who admitted to a congressional committee being paid $25,000 to do a book on Castro. Other sponsors have long been leaders in leftist movements.

Immediate aim of the Emergency Committee is to reverse the Commerce Department's refusal to permit the shipping of powdered milk to Cuba. Authorization was denied by Commerce Secretary Luther Hodge, and the Emergency Committee is making strenuous undercover efforts to pressure him to grant this exception to the economic blockade.

Strangely, certain State Department officials favor that. They are credited with urging it be done, "on humanitarian grounds."

This backstage situation has become known to congressional aides and they are watching it closely. They are prepared to take the matter directly to President Johnson if developments warrant.

The Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, headed by Senator James Eastland (D-Miss.), is making a detailed scrutiny of the Emergency Committee. Particularly under inquiry is information that Castro elements are putting money into this organization.

The Senate investigators have obtained literature put out by the committee, including a letter signed by Sidney J. Gluck, N. Y., chairman, outlining plans, as follows:

"The Emergency Committee for Disaster Relief continues to make shipments of needed medicines and relief supplies to the people of Cuba through the Hospital Nacional in Havana. We are at this time making every effort to get a reversal of the Commerce Department's denial of our application to ship powdered milk, which is to be used for children and the hospitalized. Our appeal has been heard and we are awaiting the results. We do plan to continue with our appeal on a higher level should the present one be turned down."

"There is a possibility that we will be granted permission for a delegation to visit Cuba to get on-the-spot information concerning distribution of the relief supplies which we have been sending and it is quite possible that a first-hand report will be made by a very prominent person at our public meeting."

"We urge that you support the work of our Committee by (1) sending a contribution directly to us, (2) purchasing advance tickets to our meeting and getting your friends to come, and (3) by sending a letter to the Department of Commerce asking that they grant permission for the shipment of powdered milk."

The conference deliberated on all the safety factors necessary for the prevention of birth defects. Although it could not definitively establish the effects of all drugs in all doses, the conference did clarify many of the confusions that exist. Further meetings were proposed.

All medication during pregnancy should be administered, supervised and controlled by the physician, in order to ensure its greatest efficiency and its greatest safety to the mother and to the child.

MENTALLY RETARDED? The diagnosis of mental retardation in infants should be made with extreme caution, suggests Dr. Richard Koch of Los Angeles, California. An intensive nine-year study of 143 children was conducted at the Child Development Clinic of the Children's Hospital in Los Angeles.

Dr. Koch found that twenty-four per cent of the children who had previously been classified as "retarded" before the age of one, were later found to have IQ's in the normal range.

He stresses that the diagnosis of retardation in many instances was originally made because of the child's inability to see or to hear properly due to defective vision or hearing. When these defects were corrected with eyeglasses and hearing aids, the children were able to function normally.

These men were consulted before any important event. If the signs were unfavorable, the event was postponed.

The bird watchers were called "augurs" — probably from "avis," the Latin word for bird, and "garrus," to talk.

The English verb "augur," to forecast or anticipate, retains much of the original meaning.

Dear Abby

Turn The Tables Completely

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've just been robbed! My husband has decided to take over the grocery shopping. We are not poor, but HE is going to show ME how to cut corners. He buys perishable food in large quantities and bargain canned goods we will never use. Marking was my only outing and I really enjoyed being away from him and my three children for an hour or two every Saturday. He says I am welcome to come along (with three children). I say, NUTS! I have seen men marketing and they fall into one of three categories: 1. Henpecked husbands. 2. Bachelors. 3. Penny Pinchers. How can I change his mind?

ROBBED

DEAR ROBBED: He's strutting. It won't last. To bring his corner-cutting experiment to a screeching halt, tell him he who buys the food has to cook it. Hand him the whole assignment, complete with KP. And let the kids climb all over him while YOU read the sports section.

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 and "M" is 17. "M" is a real doll. I heard that "M" thought I was cute so I managed to be outside the door of his classes whenever I could so he would see me. Then I walked past his house about a dozen times a day, but he still didn't notice me. I did a real dumb thing and wrote him sort of a crazy love letter and stuck it in his locker, but nothing happened. Then one of my friends got the bright idea that I should call him up and tell him I got a message to call him. Well, that bombed too. I really want this guy. What do I do to attract his attention now that I have made a perfect fool of myself?

PERFECT FOOL

DEAR FOOL: No one is perfect. Leave the poor kid alone.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding that married woman who used to run home and cry on her mother's shoulder every time she and her husband had a little spat. Well, for the first couple of years of my marriage, MY wife used to run home to cry on HER mother's shoulder about once every two months. Then I found out that her mother had been dead for years and my little wife was crying on somebody else's shoulder. Better tell that husband it doesn't hurt to check once in a while.

"DUMPED HER"

DEAR ABBY: I disagree with your advice that the married daughter (married to an interior decorator, yet!) should display that hideous $200 gift vase even though it ruins her decorating scheme. If they must keep the vase, they should place a beautifully lettered card beside it saying, "GIFT FROM MOTHER."

Beatle Attention

By George Dixon

WASHINGTON — Britannia's Prime Minister arrived in the nation's capital at 10:40 the other morning. The Beatles departed at 12:30 p.m., an hour and 40 minutes later. Baiting to everybody over 20, the coming of the Queen's First Minister was as nothing compared to the going of the Beatles.

It couldn't have been that the Beatles attracted more attention because they can't spell Beatles. In this respect, Sir Alex Douglas - Home is equally endowed. Home can't spell Hume.

On the face of it, you'd assume that a chap who went around calling himself "Home" and spelling it "Home" would arouse as much curiosity as Beetle-brones who spell themselves "Beatles." But such proved not to be the case, although there are people who contend that Hume-Home is just as important to Anglo-American relations as the Beatles - Beatles.

Moreover, Hume - Home was invited to the White House, which is considered to lend publicity value these days, and the best the Beatles - Beatles made was the British Embassy. An explanation might be that the Beatles were kept later at the Embassy than Home was kept at the White House; and the latter one is allowed to hang around is a new Washington status symbol. The Beatles were invited for midnight by the British Ambassador, Sir David Ormsby-Gore.

Presidential Press Secretary Pierre Salinger was asked why the Beatles weren't put up at the White House, or at the very worst, the LBJ Ranch. Mr. Salinger's reply bordered on the circuitous. He said:

"Nobody has suggested so far that failure to invite the Beatles to the White House will impair U.S.-British relations."

Mr. Salinger then muttered, "I wish my kids wouldn't try to look like Beatles."

Mr. Salinger, however, was far from being the only disturbed Washingtonian. Just thinking about the Beatles seems to induce mental disturbance. They have a commonplace, rather dull act that hardly seems to merit mentioning, yet people hereabouts have mentioned scarcely anything else for days. The Beatles took conversational precedence over Panama, Vietnam, Cyprus and the Senate investigation into the activities of Bobby Beale — I mean Baker.

The Beatles are about as exciting an act as Fink's Mules. Come to think of it, this may be a partial answer. Ellen Douglas, who serves the press table in the Senate dining compound, said her nine-year-old son, Charles Douglas Jr., televised the Beatles through a misunderstanding.

"He thought it was an animal act," explained Mrs. Douglas.

Tolerant folks who, in the past, thought up excuses for the swooning over Frank Sinatra Sr., the goldfish-eating, and the violence on television, can't seem to dredge up any excuses for the Beatles. They don't even say that the Beatles come from broken homes and feel insecure.

They don't even mumble that there's no such thing as a bad Beatle, or that the Beatles could be salvaged for society by kindness and understanding.

Recalling the absolute dizziness of one's own adolescence doesn't help anybody over 20 understand the craze for the Beatles. In my own adolescence, which came when I was about 35 or 40, I indulged in two eccentricities with a newspaper frenzy.

We would walk down opposite sidewalks of a crowded Manhattan street. One of us would bellow across at the other, "What time is it?" The other would whip out a dollar watch and fling it across the street, yelling, "Look for yourself!"

The other trick was to board one of the old double-decker buses. We'd ascend to the top deck and sit beside the most dignified - looking gent we could spot.

Then one of us would pretend to sneeze, with a loud "A-choo!" and the other would squirt water from a water pistol on the guy's neck. The sneezer would apologize profusely, then do it again.

This, however, was just good dirty childish fun. It was infinitely more rational than anything about the Beatles.

Banking For Students

"Save your money kids, there are rougher days ahead."

These were the words my dad passed on to a flock of four. Fortunately three took heed while the other followed the "Let tomorrow take care of itself" philosophy.

We have an abibi, however. During our soul searching days there was no such group as the Pocono Chapter of the American Bank Institute.

Today the teenagers are getting an education in the field of finances. Last week the three local banks distributed 1,000 copies of a booklet to Pleasant Valley, Pocono Mountains Joint, Stroud Union, East Stroudsburg Joint and Pocono Catholic Missions High Schools.

We were interested in the project and picked up a copy from John Veneria, the Monroe Security banker, who helped push the promotion for the area's three commercial bank institutions.

Right off the bat, Page One asks What Is Money? Then there was a quote, "Fortunes are the savings of man . . . not the findings" by Anonymous.

This guy Anonymous knows what he is talking about. We've been searching for years and never found a penny. On the other hand we've never saved either. So money has its barriers whether you read about it or count it.

Seriously, the bankers are trying to make school students conscious that a dollar put away today will be the means to obtain goods and services later.

You have to admit the bankers know what they are talking about. A constant stream of troubled financiers to the local holders of cash indicates that a few of us never seem to learn our lesson.

Now, via the simple indoctrination course of the Pocono Chapter of the American Bank Institute, the value of the dollar is pin-pointed wisely and objectively.

The booklet boils down to this:

First What Is Money? Then, What Is A Bank? Later, What Is A Check? Followed by What Is Savings? Then, What Is A Family Budget? And last but not least, What Is A Credit Rating?

This is certainly a good gesture by the local banking community. We hope their efforts sink in and enormous trust funds are set up for each graduate's child. Anonymous says this can be done.

Speaking Of Your Health:

Drugs During Pregnancy

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Spurred by the tragic effects of the drug, thalidomide, the Commission on Drug Safety, in conjunction with the United States Food and Drug Administration, is engaged in an active program for the protection of pregnant women and their unborn children.

These forces are rigidly establishing safety rules aimed at the recurrence of such a calamity.

A recent conference on the prenatal effects of drugs brought together some of the most distinguished scientists in the field of medicine and allied endeavors.

The purpose of the conference was "to summarize briefly what is known about prenatal (before birth) effects of drugs on human embryos and to discuss the methods for minimizing drug reactions in the unborn child."

Birth malformations of newborn babies were intensively studied from the point of view of drugs, in order to learn how to prevent these defects.

Dr. George H. Acheson, Professor of Pharmacology at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine, said: "The Conference members exchanged information gained in animal experiments since the thalidomide tragedy."

He further stated: "Women of child-bearing age should not be given drugs or take them themselves unless clear and pressing reasons exist for taking them. It should be widely recognized that the taking of a drug always entails a risk to the taker, that millions of people take drugs unnecessarily, and that there is no such thing as a drug completely safe to take."

Dr. F. Clarke Fraser, Professor of Genetics at McGill University, emphasized that individuals vary widely in their reactions to drugs, in an effort to prevent birth deformities. Dr. Fraser recommends a complex program of communication between doctors everywhere on the drugs used during pregnancy.

The conference deliberated on all the safety factors necessary for the prevention of birth defects. Although it could not definitively establish the effects of all drugs in all doses, the conference did clarify many of the confusions that exist. Further meetings were proposed.

All medication during pregnancy should be administered, supervised and controlled by the physician, in order to ensure its greatest efficiency and its greatest safety to the mother and to the child.

MENTALLY RETARDED?

The diagnosis of mental retardation in infants should be made with extreme caution, suggests Dr. Richard Koch of Los Angeles, California. An intensive nine-year study of 143 children was conducted at the Child Development Clinic of the Children's Hospital in Los Angeles.

Dr. Koch found that twenty-four per cent of the children who had previously been classified as "retarded" before the age of one, were later found to have IQ's in the normal range.

He stresses that the diagnosis of retardation in many instances was originally made because of the child's inability to see or to hear properly due to defective vision or hearing. When these defects were corrected with eyeglasses and hearing aids, the children were able to function normally.

These men were consulted before any important event. If the signs were unfavorable, the event was postponed.

Stories Behind Words

by William S. Penfield

Augur

The Romans believed that the gods made known their will by certain signs or omens, and that these signs could be interpreted from the actions of birds.

There were certain men whose duty it was to observe birds — noting their flights, feeding habits and even their singing — for indications of what would happen in the future.

These men were consulted before any important event. If the signs were unfavorable, the event was postponed.

The bird watchers were called "augurs" — probably from "avis," the Latin word for bird, and "garrus," to talk.

The English verb "augur," to forecast or anticipate, retains much of the original meaning.

Commercial Air Service Unlikely

(Ed. Note: This is the last in a series of articles on the Pocono Mountains Airport — its difficulties, history, and future.)

By Jeff Cox

Daily Record Reporter

We have seen that the Pocono Mountains Airport needs a building — with hangar space, office space, rest rooms.

We have seen that there has been a bottleneck in the construction of the building. For many years it was the lack of money by the Mount Pocono Airport Authority of the Pocono Mountains Airport.

When Aero-Mod Corp. of Salisbury, Md., took over operation of the airport in April, 1963, the bottleneck was a clause in the contract between Aero-Mod and the authority.

No Liens Allowed

The clause said Aero-Mod could put no liens against any building they erect at the airport. A lien would mean a mortgage. Today, only the largest operations have money to erect buildings with ready cash. For years and years, all sides have cried, "The building we'll be all right."

For years and years, all sides have cried, "Lengthen the runways to accommodate commercial carriers — large airlines."

Authority chairman LeRoy Dangler said, "There is no doubt in my mind that when we extend our runway to 5,400 feet, Allegheny Airlines will consider re-establishing their certification for service to the Pocono Mountains Airport."

But now, a sweeping re-evaluation of this commercial airline panacea must be made. It seems that Allegheny and other large airlines probably are no longer interested.

Allegheny Not Interested

Leslie Barnes, president of Allegheny Airlines, made this painfully clear in a statement to The Daily Record concerning the airport. He pulled no punches.

"I could say, 'Sure, we're still interested in coming to the Pocono Mountains Airport!' but that wouldn't be the truth," Barnes said.

"I was up at Buck Hill two days ago," he said from his Washington executive office, and we took a car to the airport at Avoca. It took less than an hour.

"The Civil Aeronautics Board is unlikely to certify anyone for a peripheral airport like the Pocono Mountains Airport on the basis that the area is fully served by both Avoca and the Allentown - Bethlehem-Easton airports."

"You see," he said, "all these smaller points are subsidized by the federal government. Probably only 10 of 37 cities Allegheny operates in can meet their costs. The smaller the city, the greater the federal allocation needed to maintain the airport."

Federal Subsidies

"There has been much concern over the past two years over the high levels of subsidies to small airports. It amounts to $67,000,000 per year for the government."

"The trend is to reduce this figure, rather than increase it. Thus, the CAB is not in a receptive frame of mind at all."

"We would not take the time, at this time, to pursue a service to the Poconos."

"Experience is the reason," he said. "Experience shows it's a lot better to have a single airport serving a lot of small communities than a lot of small airports serving a wide area. When you get too many airports all seeking service, none get good service."

Barnes said that the multi-billion dollar road system being flung across America is completely changing the picture of travel service.

Fewer Airports

He said the trend is toward roadways serving a lot of areas, all feeding people and freight to large airports.

"If we did institute service — and I don't think we could — we'd have to be subsidized by the government. And I don't think you'd find a sympathetic ear in all of Congress," Barnes said.

The airport authority has, apparently, been chasing a dream. As things now stand, the idea of instituting commercial service to the Poconos appears more than remote.

While Barnes' statement changes the reason for erecting buildings and facilities at the airport, it doesn't change the necessity of erecting these things.

Further investigation into Aero-Mod's operation has shown that the Maryland company took in gross revenues of only $14,494.23 last year. Of this, about $5,000 came from work for the Tobyhanna Army Depot. Another $6,000 came from private planes.

Aero-Mod paid the authority three and a half per cent of the gross private plane receipts of $6,000, or about $200, plus another $350 for ground rental. The money from Army work is not touched by the authority.

The authority took in about $1,978 from these fees and its own operation of the airport from Jan. 1 to April 12, 1963, when Aero-Mod took over.

In other words, the authority now receives very little money from Aero-Mod. Aero-Mod receives relatively little money from operating the airport.

Mrs. Rosemary McCullough, wife of the president of Aero-Mod, and the current director of Aero-Mod at the airport, said that Aero-Mod was responsible for operating the airport, keeping the lights on, paying the electric bill, and removing snow. "Snow removal has cost about $700 thus far this winter," she said.

Four Bleak Walls

"It hurts me as much as anyone to see these four bleak walls standing useless at the airport. Aero-Mod has cold, hard cash tied up in there. Believe me, Aero-Mod wants to leave the building so we, and the authority, and the people of the area, can benefit."

She said she didn't know how Aero-Mod was going to finish the building.

There is a possible answer: either the authority or the county could back Aero-Mod, and allow them to finish the building by borrowing money. This can be done with legal safeguards, so that the authority's or the county's investment is protected.

Must Get Help

But they must do something. If the airport were built for commercial airlines 15 years ago, it might now be as big as Avoca, or the A-E-B Airport. But that is conjecture.

We are faced with the fact that the Pocono Mountains Airport is going to have to depend for some time on private plans for revenue.

No use snapping fingers and saying, "Aw, shucks."

Let the people of Monroe County get behind this airport so that facilities for complete private plane service are available. As the area grows, the airport will grow.

And as the area grows, perhaps someday commercial carriers will clamor to touch ground at Mount Pocono.

Hal-Joe Case On Lips Of Everyone

By BOB CLARK

Daily Record Managing Editor

STROUDSBURG — "What's the latest line on the Hal-Joe case," a man yelled in the corridors of Monroe County's courthouse yesterday. He was only kidding this speaker of gambling lingo, but this was the general feeling of inquisitive persons and onlookers at the second day of the Hal H. Harris versus Joseph H. Small libel trial before Judge James Rutherford of Wayne County.

Everyone appears to be enjoying his "finest hour." The two opposing attorneys, Phillip Williams, Small's version of Perry Mason, and Kennard Lewis Harris' image of the elder one of The Defenders, draw the audience along with every word they produce.

Curiosity killed the cat, but not the ones who are jamming their way into the courtroom on the second floor of one of Stroudsburg's oldest buildings. Lawyers who want to hear and see file in and out of the railed in section constantly. County officials, their assistants and plain John and Mary Public lean on each word.

You can't help wonder what the next word will be. Witnesses like Dr. Harold Waidelich, the Pennsylvania Dutch pharmacist who speaks better English than most, and Harris himself, the perfect specimen of a politician you are most likely to read about than see, occupy the spotlight to the delight of all.

Whispers continually erupt throughout the trial. One can hear a murmur, "I did not know that," or "What will he say next?"

Small and Harris both have kept their composure throughout the ordeal. Neither expressed dissatisfaction with the other's remarks. However, it is a point of principle that is carrying the case longer than most experts believed it would go.

You can't go anywhere in Stroudsburg and not hear some of the testimony rehearsed or questions asking "What's the latest in the Small-Harris duel?"

No case within the last few years has stirred up more comment. However, there appears little controversy on the outside on who will win. Most of the talk concerns what the witnesses said and what is expected to be offered before the trial ends.

Actually no one is picking a winner. The general consensus is that when all the evidence is in there will be two losers.

PM Board Answers Contract Charges

SWITZWATER — Pocono Mountain Joint School Committee, recently attacked for its laxity in awarding low bid contracts, last night made a rebuttal public repudiating the charge.

The report, a detailed study of all bidding done in the jointure in the past two years, showed that except in rare instances all contract work was awarded to the lowest responsible bidder.

The report made at a meeting at the high school at Switzwater, was amended to explain why, in certain cases, the low bidder was not chosen.

The board had been under fire since its January meeting when John Montgomery, Pocono Township committee member, charged the board was losing public confidence because contracts were not going to the low bidder.

Don Robbins of Tannersville, who attended the meeting, told the committee, "I don't think it was his intention to question anybody's integrity. There are an awful lot of people throughout the county who have lost confidence in the school committee."

Montgomery Satisfied

Last night Montgomery said he was "completely" satisfied with the findings of the report, which was compiled by David Neison, jointure business secretary.

It covers a period from February, 1962 to January, 1964 and lists every bidder and their prices on 91 bid projects.

In a statement attached to the report Dr. Edmund Magann said:

"Recently the integrity of the joint school committee members was public questioned in regard to awarding contracts on the basis of competitive bidding."

"The impression was created that the committee consistently ignored the low bidder and capriciously awarded contracts with no thought to either low bid or quality of the merchandise involved and have, therefore, lost the confidence of the public."

The enclosed report substantiates the statement that the joint school committee consistently ignores the low bidder.

"We would like to point out that a lot of valuable time was lost in compiling the enclosed report. This time could otherwise have been directed in the interests of efficiency and economy of the operation of the Pocono Mountain Joint Schools."

History of Bidding

"We expect, in the near future, to call a special meeting of the joint school committee to discuss the enclosed 'History of Bidding' and the current mechanics of bidding as employed by the Pocono Mountain Joint Schools."

In other business the committee:

Noted that Richard W. Rusch, a 1963 jointure graduate, was graduated with honors from recruit training at the U.S. Naval Training Center at Great Lakes, Ill.

Heard a request from Bernard Pallo, member from Mt. Pocono and chairman of the budget and finance committee, urging department heads to start working on their budget recommendations for next year.

Pallo said his committee will start preliminary work on the budget Feb. 26.

Catholic Opposes Artificial Birth Control

EAST STROUDSBURG — The Rev. John M. Dougherty, administrator of St. Ann's Parish in Tobyhanna, explained the opposition of the Catholic Church to artificial birth control at a meeting of the Neuman Club of East Stroudsburg State College Tuesday.

Father Dougherty, a licentiate in sacred theology and graduate of Notre Dame with a masters degree, spoke to the college club at St. Matthew's auditorium.

Church Condemnation
"The Catholic Church today," he said, "stands pretty much alone in its condemnation of artificial birth prevention. For years the other denominations stood by her side in opposing the use of contraceptives."

"But, one by one they have abandoned or modified their original position until at last only the Catholic Church remains to proclaim and defend the traditional stand."

"For the Catholic Church, standing alone," he remarked, "is not new."

"It has done so for centuries and where moral issues are at stake, she will continue to do so."

"And her stand will not be changed simply because a questionable number of badly informed Catholics express a desire to have it changed. Morals, he pointed out are not determined by numbers. Thirty thousand Frenchmen can be wrong."

Father Dougherty said, "In her sincere, sympathetic love for all men the Catholic Church suffers much today in her concern for neglected children of large families, starving peoples, and the multiple agonies consequent on irresponsible conceptions and births."

"Her priests dutifully advise couples against more children when causes, economic or hygienic, call for this advice."

"But a certain confidence pervades the church. It is a confidence in the Good God. It is a confidence that assures the church her sympathy is true because she keeps not God's light from her heart's great love: men and women in their present agony."

Onanism Forbidden
"This light of God the Church finds in the sacred scriptures and in reason."

"Onanism finds its name to be originated in the scripture and God's displeasure with the act is a constant warning to the church, as it was to the church fathers, the Theologians and scripture scholars for centuries on end."

"The light of reason the church also sees as a light given by and coming from God. She trusts it especially in its most brilliant gleams. She trusts it as she finds it in the doctrine of natural law enunciated by Aristotle and St. Thomas Aquinas."

"The argument against artificial birth control found in natural law is often put forth superficially that, being popular and easier to understand, it may have a wider audience."

"But, underlying this surface argument and serving as its basis, there is an understanding of the natural law which leaves no room for the fanciful objections often put forth."

"The argument rests on a Thomistic-Aristotelian vision of reality."

Natural Law
"It states: The scientific observation of induction indicates without exception a process of motion in substantial beings and this process brings such beings to completion or perfection."

"Actions or motions of such beings which tend toward the perfection of the being are said to be good, and whatever prevents beings from their completion or perfection are said to be evil."

"These, the primal sense of good and evil, be arrived at because the tendency of a being toward its perfection is said to be the natural law of that being."

"Hence, 'wrong,' 'evil,' 'bad' are predicated of whatever violates that law. To say then, that there is a natural law one must comprehend the existence of substantial beings, (beings not dependent on another for their existence), a tendency in these beings bringing them to a completion, fulfillment and perfection."

"And to say that natural law is violated, one must show that such a tendency has been interfered with or, as can happen in the case of man, has interfered with itself to such an extent that the being itself is held from its destined perfection, a destiny not assumed but observed through induction."

Preventing Birth
"Where man or woman deciding to prevent the birth of a child, tamper with the act of love in such a way that this tendency of loving, so fundamental to their being, is violated and veered from its observable normal course, the natural law of their being is violated."

"The psychological, physical and social effects of such violation are admittedly vague but only more certain for their vagueness, human knowledge carrying within it that check on man's pride, that paradox which lessens certitude when obscurity and vagueness are lessened."

"While I admit the sincerity of Dr. Rock, he clearly does not speak for the Catholic Church, does not enjoy the approval of the church."

"Actually his method of birth control is contrary to the church's teaching precisely because the doctor is assuming an imitation of nature without possessing a sufficient and detailed understanding of nature."

"True, pregnancy prevents further conception. True, the pill by like means, prevents further conception. But this does not mean that the pill accomplished in the being of woman the total effects of pregnancy, the speaker argued briefly."

Material Expression
"The speaker concluded that the causal love of men and women in marriage is a material expression of a spiritual love they have for each other. It is further a component of that love, a guardian and a restorer of that love."

"The restraint of carnal love when the spiritual love is what man and woman are capable of making it, will not destroy their love, but will further it in much the same way that its use will further it."

the reason for this message of the church.
"Her hopeful prayer is that men being willing to obey their reason, even if at the expense of their convenience and pleasure, will thus avoid the tragedies certain to follow the violation of a law so fundamental to human nature."

Nun, Ex-Nazi Prisoner Dies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Sister Madeleine Sophie, who spent three years in a Gestapo prison camp during World War II, died Tuesday at the Medical Mission Sisters' motherhouse here. Following her release after the war she served on the General Council of the society and as a postulant mistress. She also served as superior of local convents of the order in Washington and Atlanta, Ga. Services will be held Friday.

Rotarians Plan Visit To Bermuda

MT. POCONO — Thirteen persons have booked passage on the March Vacation Trip to Bermuda. The trip is sponsored by the Mt. Pocono Rotary Club. Those making the trip are Mr. and Mrs. John Crandall; Dr. and Mrs. Horace Butler; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Vogt; Mr. and Mrs. John Latzianich; Mr. and Mrs. John Wolfe; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fossa, and Lino Morelli.

The trip is open to all Rotary Club members and their friends. Those going on the trip will fly by jet airplane. The plane will leave March 15 and return March 22.

The Rotary Clubs of Hamilton and St. George in Bermuda are looking forward to the visit. Bing Morris, general manager of the Carlton Beach Hotel, and William Whittle, resident manager and formerly of Stroudsburg, have a special swizzle party, sightseeing tour and other entertainment scheduled for the visiting Mt. Pocono Rotary brothers and their guests.

PUP'S SELF-PROTECTION
HUGOTON, Kan. (AP) — M. D. May has reservations about dog being man's best friend.

May had his dog in the car when he drove into Hugoton on business. He closed the windows to keep the dog in the car and left his keys in the ignition while he tended to business.

When he returned the dog had pushed all the car door lock buttons, locking himself safely inside.

$50,635 Budget For Chestnuthill

BRODHEADSVILLE — Chestnuthill Twp. supervisors tentatively approved a budget of $50,635.48 at a special meeting Tuesday night. The tax millage will remain at four mills and the $5 per capita tax remains.

The budget is open to public inspection, and will remain open for the next 20 days.

The budget shows $1,970 for administrative expenses. This includes $350 as payment to the supervisors; $1,200, secretary-treasurer salary; $120, audiitors; $50, supplies; $100, bonds for the officials; and $130, solicitor fees.

The tax collector's commission in the township is $900. The only other expense for the tax collector is a $50 payment to cover his bond.

Total fire protection is estimated at $1,456.90. This includes a $1,000 contribution to the West End Fire Co. in Brodheadsville, and a payment of $456.90 to the fireman's relief.

Total expenses estimated for highways in the township is $38,000. This includes $2,000 for snow removal; $1,300 for repair of tools and machinery; $16,000 for road construction, and $10,000 for maintenance and repair of township roads and bridges.

Also listed as expenses are: $70 for the annual supervisors convention; $20 for dues to the township supervisors association; $21 for Pennsylvania Township News; $125.70 for group life insurance; $120 for advertising at various times during the year, and $1,200 for the operation of the township dump.

The budget also notes an estimated $30,000 from the state for refund from the State Motor License Fund.

Radiocarbon dating of charcoal from the ruins near L'Anse aux Meadows, a small Newfoundland fishing village, indicates the site was occupied about 1000 A.D. when Leif Ericson and other Viking seafarers traditionally sailed from Greenland to North America.

British laws permit a car owner to hold the same license number for life. The car dealer who holds "AT" refused $50,000 for the number.

In the Himalayan kingdom of Sikkim the license tags on the royal family's car have no numbers, simply the word "Sikkim."

In a letter addressed to Walter Sebring, assistant superintendent of county schools, Stephan R. Matos requested that the county office make available to the committee studies involving tax rates in new school set-ups.

Matos said he would like to have the material that enabled Sebring to arrive at a tax figure of a 38 mill assessment if county schools had been a single unit during the 1962-63 school year.

Truck, Laborer

Harry J. Bosold, councilman, read a letter in which he requested a new borough truck and borough laborer. It was pointed out that there was no money available for requested expenditures because the balance on hand would not be needed until 1964 tax collection which will be due in summer.

Nelson Lee, councilman, read a letter requesting an increase in salary to $4,600 a year. Harry Bosold made a motion that the salary of Duane Honey be increased from $4,300 to $4,400. He also said the increase should be included in the budget stand.

There was no action taken on the salary of J. Henry Smith, chief of police.

The budget was approved for public inspection within 10 days. The adoption of the budget will take place at the March 2 meeting.

James Pritchard, borough solicitor, presented proposed ordinances retaining the tax levels at the 1963 level with a per capita tax of $5 and 8 mills on real estate, one per cent earned wage tax which was previously adopted, and no occupation tax.

Dallas Too Bitter To Try Ruby, Civic Leaders Say

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—A series of Dallas business and professional leaders testified yesterday that this city is full of bitter resentment against Jack Ruby, that he shamed the city by killing Lee Harvey Oswald, and that he would have a hard, uphill effort to find a fair jury here.

The witnesses included Earle Cabell, former mayor; Stanley Marcus, president of Neiman-Marcus department store; and several lawyers.

But a Methodist minister, the Rev. William A. Holmes, said Ruby could get a just trial in Dallas. The Methodist pastor is the man who, the day Oswald was killed, preached in his church and repeated later on television that some Dallas school children had cheered when told President John F. Kennedy had been shot.

They were witnesses summoned by the defense in an effort to prove Dallas is as anxious to burnish its image as an up-right city that it would be impossible to find 12 men in this community of more than a million who would try Ruby impartially.

Ruby, 52, a balding strip-joint operator, shot Oswald Nov. 24 before a national television audience as Oswald was being transferred from City Jail to County Jail.

Oswald had been charged with murder in the assassination of President Kennedy two days earlier. He also was charged with murder in the shooting of Patrolman J. D. Tippit and with attempted murder in the shooting of Gov. John B. Connally of Texas that same day.

The state charged Ruby with murder in the death of Oswald, and Dist. Atty. Henry Wade said he would seek the death penalty. The defense, headed by Melvin Belli of San Francisco, said it would prove Ruby was innocent because he had been driven temporarily insane by the shock of the President's death.

The trial is scheduled to begin Monday unless Dist. Court Judge Joe B. Brown grants the defense motion to move it to another city.

ESSC Will Host Driver Parley

EAST STROUDSBURG — East Stroudsburg State College will host 100 representatives from secondary schools as part of a state-wide Youth Traffic Safety Conference Saturday.

The theme of the conference, held simultaneously in 14 state colleges across the state, is "A Drive for Better Driving." It is hosted and directed in East Stroudsburg by Prof. Howard DeNike, head of the youth traffic safety program at ESSC.

Secondary school representatives from Monroe, Wayne, Pike, Northampton, Carbon, Lackawanna, and Luzerne Counties will be present.

In the morning, Dr. LeRoy J. Koehler, ESSC president, will deliver the opening remarks. Prof. DeNike will introduce the keynote speaker, Irvin L. Good, director of public safety in Bethlehem.

The secondary school representatives will then split into groups for discussion topics.

The afternoon program will consist of group discussions and summary reports by group chairmen.

Some of the group discussion topics covered will be: a code of ethics for young drivers and how to implement the code; courteous and discourteous driving; community projects; radar speed control; hot rod driving clubs; and the psychology of traffic accident prevention.

Local parents and interested people are invited.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

What women considered suitable to wear to a fashion show at a ski lodge was appropriate enough a sort of winter version of the fashions they were seeing for Spring. Knit costumes and smart wools, and suits. Very handsome they looked, too.

Also very warm. Camelback lounge was packed so solid with humanity that even surrounded by snow it was sweltering. But the committee coped nobly, and the crowd was congenial, so everybody seemed to have a wonderful time.

Appropriately enough, the proceeds from the fashion show will be going to the General Hospital expansion fund, and the hospital is going to have to expand pretty fast to keep up with the winter sports injuries. Actually the statistics are probably very small considering the great number of skiers on the slopes these days.

However, Carol Sweet is finding that being even a small statistic can be pretty upsetting to future plans. The Sweets and the Balabons and their babies have been spending a winter vacation at Kay Balabon's parents home with the Baldwins in Florida.

The mothers have taken turns baby-sitting both babies. Yesterday morning was Carol's turn to ski but on the last run she broke her leg and ended up in the hospital while Kay continues with both babies. Fortunately, the break wasn't as bad as they had feared so they'll manage, but with a considerable change of plans.

As a change of pace, Mrs. William Gorman kept her fingers busy at the Republican Council meeting yesterday afternoon crocheting a steel wool. The results are used to tie up plastic net into balls that look as if they were going to be carried by a bridesmaid but actually are the handsomest pot-cleaners, designed for the new missile material cookwear. Whether for the Hospital Aux., the Republican Council I didn't get to ask. With Mrs. Gorman you can be sure they're for some worthy cause.

Child Finds Security In Science

STROUDSBURG — "Science helps children find a sense of security," Lester J. Bowers told parents and teachers of Morey PTA this week.

Mr. Bowers, who is in charge of the elementary student teacher program for East Stroudsburg State College, was guest speaker at Morey's February meeting Monday night. He discussed the purposes for teaching science in the elementary school and had some pointed advice for parents in the guidance of their children.

"We feel secure in the things we know," Mr. Bowers said. "We can live better in the world around us, and better adjust to its changes."

"Science helps the student become a better thinker. The scientific, logical application and evaluation of facts — and the development of this habit — gives the student security in knowledge."

As an example, Mr. Bowers cited the experience of a fourth grade girl who was frightened by the flashing of lightning. When questioned about this, the girl said she believed lightning was "God coming to earth in search of sinners."

"In things as simple as this, an understanding of the unknown brings a sense of security," he added.

When curiosity and an inquiring mind is stimulated in the child, Mr. Bowers explained, he doesn't have to be told everything and forced to read. His own curiosity will stimulate his desire to read "and he will devour everything he can find in search of answers."

"I wonder why," Mr. Bowers said, "are three good words for parents to use to help develop a scientific attitude in their children. Let your children know you are not afraid of tomorrow."

Several student teachers from ESNC and science teachers from other schools in the county were present to hear Mr. Bowers.

The business meeting was in charge of Robert Widmer, Morey PTA president.

Miss Dianne Lois Nelson Is Bride Of David Carey

Swiftwater — Miss Dianne Lois Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Nelson of Swiftwater, became the bride of David Arthur Carey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Carey, Mount Pocono, on Saturday, Feb. 1, at the Mount Pocono Methodist Church with Rev. Wesley Meixell officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of pen de soie with clusters of sequins. The fitted bodice had long sleeves and the apron overskirt was worn over layers of tiered lace. Her veil was attached to a crown of seed pearls. She carried a prayer book with a white orchid, stephanos and trailing ivy caught with miniature carnations.

Mrs. Judy Shaw, sister of the bride, as matron of honor wore a dress of coral velvet and taffeta with a matching headpiece and carried a semi-cascade bouquet of miniature carnations centered by triplarian roses.

Miss Barbara Carey, sister of the bridegroom, wore a dress of royal blue velvet and taffeta and carried miniature carnations with miniature carnations and triplarian roses.

Robert Carey was his brother's best man. David Nelson, brother of the bride, and Robert Shaw, her brother-in-law, served as ushers.

Prior to the ceremony, Mrs. Mason Linn sang "Because," "O Perfect Love," and during the wedding prayer, "The Lord's Prayer." Mrs. Edwin Beseker was organist. Bouquets of white gladioli, mums and snapdragons graced the altar.

The bride's mother wore a beige dress with brown and pink accessories with a corsage of pink cymbidium orchids. The bridegroom's mother wore beige with gold accessories and a gold cymbidium orchid corsage.

A reception for about 100 guests was held at the Paradise Community Center, Swiftwater, which had been decorated in white with white wedding bells, white candles and flowers. The four-tier wedding cake was topped by a miniature bride and bridegroom.

For their wedding trip to Washington and Virginia, the bride wore blue with black accessories and an orchid corsage. They are residing in Swiftwater.

Prior to the wedding, the bride was honored at a miscellaneous shower given by Barbara Carey, Judy Shaw and Charmaine Batchelor.

Anna Logans Plan Fair Food Booth

Stroudsburg — The Anna Logan Hospital Auxiliary of Stroudsburg discussed plans for a food booth at the West End Fair and a complete report on the birthday calendars was given.

The sewing project for the hospital was completed and the following committee served refreshments in the Valentine motif by Mrs. Joseph Viglione, Mrs. Paul Edinger, and Mrs. Nelson Beers.

Council Meeting

Bartonsville — The council of St. John's Lutheran Church met at the church on February 5. Pastor Robert Zuch presided.

Officers elected for 1964 are Alvin Luckey, vice president; Thelma Field, secretary; William Felthman, treasurer.

It was voted to install outdoor lighting, with automatic timer.

Mitchell Stackhouse. There will be no meeting of the class in March because of Lent.

400 Crowd Camelback For Club's Fashion Show

Tannersville — It began with two groups of skiers bearing lighted torches shrouded out of the night. It ended with the entrance of a camel.

In between the 400 people who jammed into Camelback Ski Lodge saw a show of Spring Fashions sponsored by the Stroud Community Woman's Club for the benefit of the expansion fund of the General Hospital of Monroe County, featuring fashions from Frances Burrows.

Mrs. Edward Driebe, chairman of the fashion show committee, was apologetic about the 150 people who had to stand during the show. The committee had prepared places for 250 people and were overwhelmed by the crowd, drawn both by curiosity to see the Pocono's newest and biggest ski lodge and by the fashions themselves.

Members of the club, aided by the lodge staff, served refreshments in two shifts: one before the show, and one afterward when the standees could sit. Sallie Ferrebee served as commentator, and special music preceded the show.

Through the window walls of the ski lodge, the audience watched the dramatic opening as two groups of four skiers each swept down the slope bearing lighted torches.

In the first group were Bill Reinhardt and Mike Wyckoff, Alti Bensinger and Al Keeney; in the second group, Richard McClelland, Tom Wyckoff, John Bensinger and Tom Keiper.

Modeling new fashions for Spring were Ruth Lesoine, Jo McDowell, Evelyn Taylor, Kathy Dolan, Diane Shafer, Jo Ann Pitzer, Kate Mullins, Joan Nichols, Joan Montgomery and Phyllis Brodsky.

As commentator, Mrs. Ferrebee called attention to the fashion highlights: the knit costumes in the spring's pale, pale shades or luscious ice cream colors; the Dynasty silk shantungs, the "wuzzy" wools. Silhouettes ranged from the high waisted to low-waisted, from slightly to very fitted, from slim to bouffant.

The new, softer look was exemplified in gathered necklines, in gathered bodices and skirts above waistlines, in the bows of the "poet look." Color and fabric contrasts combined with white tassel dresses with sleeveless jackets in mohair.

Shoulder bags to leave the hands free for picture taking at the World's Fair; hats with sweeping brims or high rise crowns in contrast colors such as green straw with a blue ribbon; important pins were among the accessories she stressed.

The show ended on a note of laughter as a life-sized camel led by Robin Bensinger entered on the legs of Camelback masks, John and Alti Bensinger, with the sign "Thank You All for Coming."

More complete report of the fashion show will be presented at the regular meeting of the Stroud Community Club tonight at the YMCA. A closed business session at 7:30, open to members only, will be followed by the program which is open to guests as well.

The program will feature "Hair Styles by Michael."

THE WYCKOFF SHOPPER

Tomorrow is Valentine's Day, and it delights me to see that many of the men-about-town have been early shoppers. I had forgotten that this was the all-important week, until I noticed quite a few men buying heart-shaped boxes of chocolate on Monday. As one of my co-workers said, "I'd almost swear that all those who are buying THIS early are the same ones who caught you-know-what for forgetting the date entirely last year." Could be.

There is something about seeing all of those big satin boxes of candy that makes me yearn for the yesterdays when I received them.

Betty Shively and I were mooning over a huge 10.00 box the other day, back by our Test Room steps, when she said, "I remember when I got boxes of candy like this."

I nodded in agreement. "But let's face it," I said, "our day is over."

"Oh, I don't know," commented the sprightly Betty. "Maybe I'll buy me a box with my tip money."

If she does, I hope she keeps her Ralphie in the dark and makes him jealous!

There are so many delightful Valentine gift suggestions in our store — and some of them are not the least bit expensive. For instance: our Jewelry Department has the daintiest heart jewelry you can imagine for one and two dollars each piece. I particularly like the scatter pins of mosaic in brilliant colors, imported from Italy.

There are tiny pendants too, swinging from delicate chains. One heart, which might be plastic-trimmed or enameled (I should have examined it more carefully) is of sterling silver, rhodium plated, on a chain of the same. It is 3.50, I believe. And there are tiny rhinestone-set heart-shaped earrings as well as pendants at two dollars.

Not whole-heartedly Valentinish, but very Spring-like and colorful just the same, is the new fruit jewelry so deliciously arranged in a basket in our Center Aisle. There are peaches . . . raspberries . . . limes . . . all looking juicy and tempting. Just the thing to add a bit of whimsy and a lot of joie de vivre to the simplest dress.

Since Valentine's Day falls during Lent, gifts that say, "I love you" to a special person may also be of a religious nature. In our International Gift Center we have religious pictures and plaques that are an excellent way of carrying spiritual belief into the home. In our Keystone room right now, we are displaying a magnificent plaque of the Last Supper, crafted in metal combining gold and silver tone, that retails at 25.00. It would be perfect in a church hall . . . a rectory or parsonage . . . a parochial school dining hall . . . or even in a private home.

We also sell rosaries at Wyckoff's as well as necklaces with medals or crosses. Some of these are inscribed, "I am a Protestant." Others mention the names of specific churches — Methodist, Presbyterian, and so on. Rosaries are 1.00 and up; medals, 5.00.

In our downstairs Millinery Department, we have just received a large selection of lace head-pieces for wear at church. One is a small lace-trimmed net triangle at 98c only. Large triangles of lace are 2.98. Large lace scarves are 1.19. Some styles are black only; others, black, white, or golden beige.

Facts Sell Ideas

By Cyrus Barrett, Jr.
DEAR CY:

I am new at my company and not about to turn everything upside down. It seems logical, however, for our large corporation to come out with competing products in the style of Procter and Gamble. If they can have Ivory Flakes, Joy, Mr. Clean, Oydol, Tide, Spic and Span, Thrill, Cheer, Dettol, and others battling in their family for cleaner sales, we can have one or two fighting it out under our roof. This sort of thing keeps outside competitors off balance, but it would be a reserach for me to propose the idea now. Where can I get facts or examples for selling this concept to my management?

JACK BORSSEN

DEAR JACK:

Procter and Gamble is listed on the New York Stock Exchange. The company is public and anyone selling securities can suds you with facts on their growth and market dominance. By writing P. & G. at 301 East Sixth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, you can secure a copy of their annual report. For more evidence of the self-competition concept, write "Advertising Age," 740 North Rush, Chicago.

Biggest innovator in the field of internal competition is Maroon Harper, Jr. As an office boy, he started with McCann-Erickson advertising agency in 1939. He became head of the company and, through mergers and acquisitions, produced In-terpublic, a great collection of advertising agencies.

Harper's billing runs close to a billion dollars annually. And... in an industry dedicated to handling non-competitive accounts, Emily Post wouldn't approve of his new business manners, but the ex-office boy has written a new book. This best

DEAR CY:

My retired husband, like Mrs. D.D.'s, is a TV lazybones. Although I am interested in various things, my lover boy is satisfied to sit in front of the TV and wants me to do the same. He is the "no conversation" type. We have a married son, who is as irritated with this silent stay-at-home as I am. A couple of months ago, you featured an article on becoming a librarian. I am 42 and at the Crossroads. Where can I learn more about library work?

TV RIVAL

DEAR TV RIVAL:

Your husband may be lazy but he is smart. He knows silence is still the best substitute for brains. While he is busy creating a lack of opportunities, you've put your finger on a field which craves trained professionals. Miss Myr! Ricking, head of recruitment at the American Library association, says, "A tremendous need for graduate librarians exists. There are 10 job offers for every library school graduate."

Formal presentation of the award, for "all-around accomplishment," will be made at a dinner on Wednesday, Feb. 26, at the Pavilion, Phillipsburg, N.J., to be attended by company officials and the entire district staff, including the personnel of the Stroudsburg office.

Of Prudential's 600 districts in the United States and Cana-

ESSC Routs Shippensburg

By KEN O'BRIEN
Daily Record Sports Editor
EAST STROUDSBURG — "We're going to throw the ball at the basket and we're going to score."

These were the pre-game words of Ken Sissen, coach of the East Stroudsburg State College basketball Warriors just before the team took the floor last night against visiting Shippensburg. He didn't look or speak like a coach who had lost 10 straight ballgames.

If Sissen's tongue was in his cheek at that time, it didn't stay there long. The Warriors, winner of only one game in 12 previous contests, blasted the Red Raiders, 118-75.

Top Score

Not only was this the first time the ESSC quintet had reached the century mark but it also ties the highest score of any team in the Pennsylvania State College Basketball Conference this season. West Chester hit 118 against Millersville Jan. 11.

And Shippensburg's scoring sensation, Reggie Weiss, was held to a meager 10 points, thanks to a fine defensive job by the Warriors' Dennis Marchionis who tallied 16 points himself.

Weiss is the scoring leader of the PSCAC with 285 points — nearly 100 more than his nearest competitor, Jack Benhart of Indiana.

Trail From Star

Shippensburg trailed from the very start with Dick Koch tapping in three straight deuces — the last of which came with 12:40 remaining in the first half — which gave the Warriors an eight-point bulge of 20-12. The Warriors continued to build up the lead from there.

Koch and Warren Landis shared scoring honors in the game with 26 apiece. Harvey Branyan bagged 24 for the winners.

The eight-point bulge which ESSC held in the first half was widened to 16 at the 8:22 juncture when the Warriors hit for 10 consecutive points — the last six by Branyan — supplying a 35-19 advantage. The Raiders were never in the ballgame from there.

Tight Defense

East Stroudsburg combined a tight defense with a hard-charging fast break to provide perhaps the biggest surprise of the conference this season. One had to wonder how this ballclub had won but only one game prior to this tilt.

By halftime, the Warriors held a commanding 66-31 lead. The 43-point difference at the end of the game was the biggest of the night.

East Stroudsburg hit for 59 per cent from the floor while Shippensburg hit for 48 per cent from the floor while tallying 13 of 24 from the charity stripe.

Dave Ruehlman Selected Area 'Brite Star' Athlete

SWIFTWATER — Dave Ruehlman is a king-sized basketball scorer who stands only 5-foot-4 — a dwarf among giants on the hardwood.

But the little guy has proven you don't have to be tall to play basketball.

Selected as the "Brite Star" of the week for his 28-point performance against Pleasant Valley last week, Dave is shooting for the Pocono Mountain High School scoring record of 373 points, set last year by Norb Ryan. He needs 63 more in five games.

310 Points

The 17-year-old senior who hopes to major in physical education at East Stroudsburg High School has netted 310 points this season while pacing the Cardinals of Coach Allen Shollenberger to a 6-10 record.

Pocono Mountain dropped its first eight games but has since come on to win six of its last seven. And Ruehlman has been a key figure — albeit a diminutive one — during that span.

Dave first started playing basketball during his elementary school days in the biddy basketball program. He was just about the same size, then.

Did you ever worry about your height? he was asked.

"Oh, yes," he replied. "It's something I've always wondered about. Even the coach once told me, 'I wish you were a foot taller.'"

"Adjustable" Player
Says Shollenberger: "I think he's a completely different type of player than he was last year. . . this year we've had to work more in the patterns and set things up more on the floor. . . Dave is adjustable and he's gotten to know the game of basketball. . . he's developed an insight into the game and has a more thorough understanding of it."

Shollenberger also noted that Dave told the other boys on the team following his selection as "Brite Star" that "it wouldn't have been possible without their help."

Speaking of his height disadvantage, the Cardinal coach says, "He's had to develop an outside shot. His quick moves and ability to steal the ball are among his major assets."

In addition to averaging 19.4 points per game, Ruehlman also is a B student at Pocono Mountain. A native of Monroe County, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ruehlman of Centerville Rd. 1.

Worried Thoughts
The flight to San Francisco does not worry Brian nearly as much as the thoughts of watching from his wheelchair while others soar.

"I don't know," said the 20-year-old Sternberg Wednesday, "how I'm going to react. I don't know whether it's going to be fun or punishment."

Brian is immobile from the shoulders down. He can control the motion of both arms, but as yet has no grasp with the fingers. Brian's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold O. Sternberg, and his girl friend, Miss Nancy McCracken, will accompany him to San Francisco.

A Bit Petulant
As for going home, Brian is just a bit petulant that he must leave the hospital in a wheelchair. He has been home on weekend visits, but this is a permanent change of address.

"I promised myself I'd never leave here except under my own power," Brian told sports editor George Meyers of the Times.

"I ought to be happy, but I'm going home on the doctor's terms, not mine. The doctors never have given me any sweet pills. They never have told me I will walk again."

"But it's my body; I know what I feel."

"They'll still be saying the same things when I get up and walk away from that chair."

ESSC Girls Win, 42-31

BOSTON (UPI) — Larry Navin, former University of Nebraska football star, has been named offensive backfield coach at Boston University. It was announced Wednesday.

YMCAs, Wyckoff Win OBBL Tilts

STROUDSBURG — YMCA trimmed IMBT's, 77-50, and Wyckoff-Sears scored a 53-48 triumph over Bixler's last night in a pair of Older Boys Basketball League games at the YMCA.

John Muller pumped in 32 points on 16 field goals to set the scoring pace for YMCA. Mike Thurston tallied 16 to pace the winning Wyckoff combine.

Bronco Horvath of Rochester, Cleveland Morison of Quebec, and Providence's Willie Marshall are deadlocked for second with 38 points. Fred Glover of Cleveland rounds out the top five with 37 points, two more than Nykoluk.

In other categories, Yves Leas of Pittsburgh is first in goals 34. Nykoluk passes the field in assists 48. Aldo Guidolin, Baltimore, with 153 penalty minutes, tops the league's "badmen"; Pittsburgh's Roger Gervier possesses the best goal-tending average 2.33; and Lorne Gump Worsley, Quebec, and Cleveland's Les Binkley, each with three shutouts, share the number one spot in whitewash jobs.

Champagne Tony Lema, the Crosby king, withdrew because of illness. Jack Nicklaus left for the East after winning the Phoenix Open championship last Sunday.

Also by-passing the Tucson event are U.S. Open champion Julius Boros and British Open champion Bob Charles.

With Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer among the missing, Gary Player of South Africa remains the only one of the "Big Three" competing at Tucson and even he has problems. Gary had to have his right ear lanced Tuesday to relieve a stopped passage.

KICKIN' AROUND — Bud Lawrence (on bottom) of East Stroudsburg State College tangles legs with Mansfield's Tony Antinns in yesterday's wrestling meet. ESSC handed visitors first loss, 23-6. Lawrence won match, 3-1.

Need Fewer Tournaments

Palmer Cites Golf Reforms

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—What pro golf needs, says Arnold Palmer, is fewer tournaments and a "big man" to run them.

Also, the fairway Croesus from Latrobe, Pa., added Wednesday, the current television squabble between the sponsors and players is ridiculous and could not occur if the game were placed in the hands of a single, strong executive.

"We need a man such as Joe Dey (executive director of the U.S. Golf Association) to administer our affairs," Palmer said, in reviewing the broad and turbulent picture of his chosen profession. "He should be an executive, with power to make decisions, such as on this television question."

Calls it "Ridiculous"
"It is ridiculous to put such important decisions in the hands of a players' committee. Jay Hebert (chairman of the players' committee) shouldn't be making decisions and announcements on long-range policy. Our players' committees change from one year to the next."

Palmer said the tour needed a director with broader powers than those now vested in Jim Gaquin, the present nominal head of the tour.

"Don't misunderstand me, Jim is a very fine guy and quite capable in his field," he added. "But he is a newspaperman. His field is public relations. He knows little about the actual operations of the tour."

Agitates Sponsors
"With 30 tournaments, I think all the top players would play in all of them, or virtually all of them. I know I would. With more than that, it is necessary to lay out at times for rest and practice, and this agitates sponsors."

"I don't mean there couldn't be more than 30, but there should only be 30 approved events. Others could be held on a non-sanctioned basis, a sort of secondary tour, if the players wanted it."

Palmer was the leading money winner last year with a record $128,230 although he didn't win any of the big four championships—the Masters, British and U.S. Opens and PGA. But he picked his spots, skipping some of the minor events. Sponsors complain that when they don't have players of the stature of Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player their tournaments suffer.

More Enterprises
Palmer, in town to add a laundry and dry cleaning business to his mushrooming enterprises, frankly discussed the tenuous issue threatening to drive a wedge between the tournament players and the men who put up the money.

The players are demanding rights to the television money. The sponsors contend this should be part of their revenue.

Palmer hasn't chosen sides in the dispute, but currently he seems more in the corner of the sponsors.

"The PGA hasn't told me what it will do with the money once it gets it," the links capitalist said. "What most of the players are interested in knowing is: 'How do we benefit from this deal?' At least, the sponsors say they'll put the money, or at least some of it, back into the purses. 'The players should get their share, but how?'"

Sal Capra, city councilman, suggested that the city include a bankruptcy clause in a four-year lease to protect the owner from his claims that any commitment here beyond two years would force him to the brink of bankruptcy. Finley turned it down.

The city has made three offers to Finley since the league handed down its directive last Jan. 16. Finley has made one.

Finley, who has threatened to file suit against the American League for refusing him permission to move the Athletics to Louisville, Ky., last month, said the league did not have the power to direct him to enter into a lease in Kansas City. "I own this baseball club 100 per cent," he said. "When I signed the American League agreement, there was nothing in there that said I had to sign any length of lease with a city."

"The American League has no authority at all to come in here. That is my business in Kansas City. This is America."

Mayor Rufus W. Davis said again the city felt it must have at least a four-year agreement in order to give baseball some stability in Kansas City.

Shuns Lease
"This is my ball club," Finley shouted. "The city of Kansas City is not going to force me into a lease I don't want."

Then, at the prompting of his attorney Gerald Phillips, Finley added, ". . . a lease that might mean bankruptcy."

Finley insisted for the record as the meeting adjourned that he had negotiated in good faith since the league issued its directive. But he admitted, with a shout:

No Concessions
"I haven't made any concessions, and I don't intend to make any."

Since the league lease directive to him on Jan. 16, Finley's only proposal has been for a two-year lease with a clause allowing him to transfer the Athletics any time he can obtain league permission. The city has insisted on nothing less than a four-year lease with no escape clause and has made three proposals since Jan. 16.

"There ain't going to be anything but a two-year contract," Finley told the city.

Finley and the city thus terminated negotiations, with the owner having only until Saturday to comply with an American League order to sign a lease here or face expulsion from baseball.

Seattle's Tresvant Self-Made Player

By JACK HEWINS
Associated Press Sports Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — Horatio Alger would have liked Big John Tresvant of Seattle University. The 6-foot-7 senior is basketball's self-made man. Big John is a gate crasher who made it on his own in a basketball world that tutors and tunes its players in high school before ticketing them for college stardom.

By Melvin Durslag

Red-Faced Yanks

INNSBRUCK, Austria — In the Olympic Village two days before the end of the Winter Games the Russian delegation invited the Americans to a small reception featuring soda pop and a local confection called Apfelkuchen.

The Americans were reluctant to accept, not for reasons of unavailability of even because of memories still lingering of the murder near here of three countrymen flying an unarmed training plane that lost its direction.

The unvarnished truth is that the Americans were so embarrassed about their performance in the Winter Olympics that they were hesitant about consorting with the Soviets who had cleaned up.

Kenneth (Tug) Wilson, president of the U. S. Olympic committee, rounded up some members of the team and packed some gifts for their hosts — a stack of souvenir bath towels in red, white and blue bearing the Olympic insignia.

The honor of distributing the towels went to Mickey (Sic) McDermott, the barber from Bay City, Mich., who won the 500 meter speed skating.

Sheepishly, Wilson announced to the Russians, "This is our gold medal winner who brings his regards to your many gold medal winners."

It made you pause to wonder about the state of things with young people in our country. The U. S. A. has never been outstanding in winter sports but its overall effort in a Winter Olympics has rarely been this watery either.

More disturbing yet, there has in most areas been no improvement, which obviously hasn't been the case with a number of other countries.

When American men finished second and third in the slalom on the next to last day here their coach wept rapturously. Champagne flowed in American quarters and joy was unrestrained.

There is, of course, nothing especially wrong with finishing in the foregoing positions but ordinarily they create no cause for ecstasy among people who inhabit a winning country.

What we mean is that nobody cracked open champagne in Los Angeles when the Dodgers finished second to the Giants in 1954.

No country is expected to sweep the works at any Olympics but when a nation the size of the United States wins but one of the 34 gold medals there are grounds for hard thought.

You are left to speculate whether our athletes have lost interest in international amateur games or whether a decay distinctly has beset our society. Has our living standard become so high that we have ceased to be tough? And, at this rate of deceleration, will our youth, amid all its lollipops, crash by the end of the century in the sense of being amateur sports leaders?

The United States even is losing its hold in the Summer Olympics. Other nations working hard and improving swiftly have come at us in men's track, at which the U. S. A. was once colossus. We are good at basketball, fair at swimming and that's just about the extent of it.

The Russians have been competing in the Winter Olympics only 12 years. In that period they have made frightening advancement. American officials here admit readily that the Soviets came to Innsbruck better trained, better coached and better prepared for the rigors of competing.

Germany is divided, occupied and still heated up. Yet it has produced tough, determined and hungry athletes who have made a better showing in the Winter Games than the U. S. A.

Undoubtedly, the Russians are offering subsidies of a sort to their Olympic competitors but benefits alone don't create the driving force required to become international champions. The will to train—punish oneself and pay the price—must come from inner reaches of the individual. And that will right now is distressingly absent in America.

Perhaps this report is unduly pessimistic. Sports are cyclical and the U. S. A. could be immersed in a slump. But chances are better than even that the cause is more basic.

One can rationalize, compromise and alibi, but the stark fact remains that a country that has competed in the Winter Olympics since its start 40 years ago should not be reduced to picking up crumbs as the U. S. A. has done at Innsbruck.

heard of him you can be forgiven.

"When somebody told my high school coach I was a starter for the Chieftains he wouldn't believe it," chuckles the ace of the Seattle attack. "I don't blame him a bit."

Launched Baylor

That would be Spingarn High of Washington, D.C., which launched Elgin Baylor on the trail to All America rating with the professional Los Angeles Lakers.

Tresvant was a year behind Baylor in school and could match him as a basketball player in only one department — bench sitting.

"I was 6-3 and awkward," John recalls. "Basketball was my poorest sport. I did better as a football end and hit .333 as a baseball catcher and first baseman."

Hoop Addict

Tresvant disappeared into the Air Force after graduation, grew four inches and became a basketball addict. He was completing his hitch at Paine Air Force Base and playing with a Seattle AAU team when Vince Cazzetta, then head coach, encouraged him to enter Seattle U.

Not until his junior year could John, gradually discarding the habits of a rugged individualist, earn a starting berth with the varsity.

"All I wanted to do was score," he remembers. "Defense was tough because I had to learn first to like it."

"I got a bigger kick now out of stopping a great scorer than I do in piling up a batch of points. Nothing would give me a bigger thrill than holding someone like Mel Counts (Oregon State's 7-footer) to about 10 points. He has a lovely touch."

Tresvant, himself, has a lovely touch on tip-ins and rebound shots. An amazing jumper, he often defeats much taller men in the backboard scrambles. John holds the university record of 41 rebounds in a single game, accomplished this season against Montana State.

Giving four inches to Henry Finkel of Dayton, he recently out-rebounded the Plyer giant 15 to 8.

"He is one of the best college forwards I have seen on the West Coast," says Coach Bob Boyd. "John has a great jumping ability and a wonderful sense of timing."

And Boyd told Seattle students at a pre-game rally: "You are lucky to have an athlete such as John to represent you. He is one of the finest men I have had the pleasure of working with."

Tresvant is 25, a student in accounting who hopes some day to join the Internal Revenue Service.

"Certainly I'd like to play professional basketball," John says, "but that's my dream. My reality is to be an accountant."

BENCH WARMER BECOMES STAR — The school that produced Elgin Baylor for the National Basketball Assn. now has another star. He's John Tresvant, 6-foot-7 star of a strong Seattle team. A top prospect for the pros, John is the team's leading scorer and top rebounder. He said one time, "Basketball was my poorest sport."

Snow Time Is Race Time

MOSCOW (AP) — For fancy horse racing you have to come to Moscow where they race troikas — sleighs with three horses steaming around the icy track in sub-zero weather.

It looks like a country sport brought to the big city, and in essence that is what it is, like pitching horseshoes in Madison Square Garden.

The drivers — there are three in each troika — are dressed not in the shiny silks of the house of Widener but in heavy overcoats, thick gloves and fur hats such as they might wear out on the Kolkhoz, or state farm, where the horses are raised.

Usually one driver handles all three horses. That is the sporting way to do it. But sometimes one of the outside horses may be a bad actor. Then he is driven by the man back of him.

The race isn't the all-out mad run of horses escaping from wolves in the woods, the way it is shown in the old Russian prints. Only the two outside gallop. The horse in the middle, which is the real prize of the team, trots. He trots with big reaching strides and his hooves crack down into the icy track. Spikes on the shoes keep the horses from slipping.

No Fast Times
Despite the fact that there are three horses, of which two gallop, they don't make as fast time as western trotting horses. The track record for 1,600 meters — that is 10 yards less than a mile — is 2 minutes 6.8 seconds. A good trotting nag in the United States can do a mile pulling sulky in less than two minutes.

The time for 2,400 meters is 3 minutes 11.6 seconds. In the United States trotters do the mile and a half in 3 minutes 2 to 5 seconds.

But the thing is, it looks fast, and it is on ice, and it is a sleigh. Besides that, everybody in the stands is bundled up to the ears, blowing steam into the frozen air and nipping a bit of vodka or brandy to ward off the Siberian blasts. The stands hold 6,000 and the stands are packed.

We went out there with a pretty little Russian girl translator who didn't know the difference between a furlong and a fellok but she made it possible for us to talk with Yevgeny Dolmatov, a cossack with a Black Sea accent who is manager of the race track.

War Veteran

He fought in the Bolshevik civil war under Semyon Budyonny, now a marshal of the Soviet Union and sort of elder statesman of the troika track.

One of the breeds of horses which gallop alongside the trotters in the troika is called a Budyonovsky. The trotters are classified either as Orlovsky or American, depending on whether they are Russian or came from American stock.

There is a sort of pari-mutuel troikas in each race. The troikas don't seem to pay much money to the winners but they certainly bunch up beautifully at the turn coming into the home stretch.

Portable Hotbed Should Be Gardener's Must

By George Abraham
HOTBEDS AGAIN — Some time back we mentioned a handy, portable hotbed which every home gardener can make and should own. This inexpensive ($25) 6 by 6 ft. greenhouse weighs only 50 lbs. and can be moved readily to any suitable plot in the backyard. It includes a soil heating cable that cuts off automatically at 70 degs. F. The frame is made of a wooden base (pine boards) and covered with a truss made of 1/2 inch electric conduit piping. For glass you use plastic film of 4-mil thickness. This ideal greenhouse can be used for starting petunias, salvia, snaps, and just about every other kind of seed, including tomatoes, peppers, and similar garden plants. It will pay for itself the first year. Through the summer it can be used to start cuttings of roses, mockorange, evergreens, and countless other shrubs. In the fall and winter it can be used to protect half-hardy and tender plants. Because of the deep interest in this portable greenhouse, I've made arrangements to supply readers of this paper with FREE plans for the construction of this portable greenhouse and propagating frame. If you'd like a free set of plans, send me your name and address and I'll do the rest. Act fast and build yourself one of these handy greenhouses now, when the gardener's chores are few. A GOOD FOLIAGE PLANT—Some of the toughest and most popular house plants belong to the Dracaena group, sometimes referred to as "corn plants." Dracaena (pronounced Drah-sea - nuh) Sanderiana is a small, thin plant with corn-like leaves having narrow white margins. D. godseffiana has dark green leaves in groups of 3, spotted with cream or yellow flakes resembling gold dust. All dracaenas are ideal for the planter and require no special care. They'll tolerate dryness and a shortage of light. If you want better color from them, move plants to a brighter window. Water them twice a week and bathe foliage regularly to remove dust. Drying of foliage can be due to poor soil, gas fumes, and dry air. Start new plants from stem cuttings rooted in a sand-peat mixture. Bird pudding — A reader sends me this recipe for making bird pudding for our feathered friends: Use 1 1/2 cups oatmeal, 1 1/2 cups bread crumbs, 1/2 cup sugar, 1/2 cup cornmeal, 1/2 cup whole wheat flour, 1T peanut butter, 1 1/2 cups melted fat or bacon grease, and two cups bird seed. Here's another pudding recipe sent me: 1 cup peanut butter, 1 cup bacon drippings, 3 cups rolled oats, 2 cups cornmeal, 1 cup wheat germ or other dry cereal. SEEDLING CARE — Gardeners who sow their own seeds are elated when they find the seed comes up as thick as hair on a dog's back, but that's only half the battle. These seedlings may die off due to damping - off disease. Just as quick as the seed has sprouted it should be moved to a bright window because from now on in you'll need all the light possible. Do not water seedlings from the top as rot is apt to set in. Soak seed flats in a pan of water until soil is wet, then remove. When the surface is slightly dry, that's the time to water again. Air circulation is important and if you find your seedlings have started to top over, try placing an electric fan nearby to increase the ventilation. When the seedlings are about 1 1/2" high, they can be transplanted into cigar boxes or individual pots. This transplanting process makes each plant huskier because the plants to not compete with one another for space and nutrients. Gently loosen the seedlings so you do not break the roots and place each one in a pot of soil contain some peat, loam, compost and sand. Allow to grow in a bright window. If the seedlings start to get tall, pinch the tops back with thumb and forefinger. This makes plants stockier. Next week: How to use Peat Pots. STRAWBERRIES AGAIN — In running over your varieties, you might want to consider Pocahontas, to me one of the nicest berry for the home garden. It produces giant - sized berries, plants are adapted to all types of soil and most climates. One objection is that the fruit is too tart, but it isn't if you allow the berries to ripen fully before picking. Picked too soon, Pocahontas is sour. Robinson also makes extra large berries, but my objection to it is that fruit is rather soft, and is worse in wet years. If you're growing for profit, this is a good berry, but for the home gardener it might not be the best berry. You might want to try a few plants of Erie and Vermilion, but don't go overboard on them. RED HOT SALVIA — Many gardeners hesitate to plant this red annual because frost would kill the blooms before you had a chance to enjoy them. This picture has been changed with the introduction of early blooming varieties such as St. John's Fire and Blaze of Fire. Salvias have different heights and different blooming dates. The shorter the plants the earlier the blooms. St. John's Fire blooms when 12" high; Blaze of Fire, 14"; Hot Jazz, 15"; Early Bonfire, 24"; Bonfire (Clara Bedman), 24 to 25"; and Splendens, 30". Salvia seed germinates slow and needs more heat than most other flowers. Start seed about first of March in 75 deg. room. Avoid overwatering as seed dampsoff easily. Keep seedlings in a bright window and transplant when they are about 1 inch high. And don't forget there is a

This works fine for small seeds. Large seeds, such as those of zinnias should be lightly covered because they have a lot of "pushing up" power. These can be covered with vermiculite, perlite, sifted muck, pulverized peatmoss, or "rubbed" (milled) sphagnum moss. After seed has been sown and covered, your next step, watering, is very important. We do not water ours from top, but rather through subirrigation. That's nothing more than placing a seed box in a shallow pan of water until thoroughly soaked. Then cover with a pane of glass and keep in a temperature of about 72 degs. Light is not needed for germination, but heat is. Below 65 degs, you get slow, spotty germination. Once germination has started, remove pane of glass immediately and place seed box in a bright window, or grow under fluorescent lights. EVERLASTING FLOWERS — "Everlastings" are items which can be used for drying and in winter bouquets. Your seed catalog will list them usually under separate varieties. When we sow fine seed such as petunia, we scatter it lightly over the surface and rather than cover it, a tomato juice can is rolled over the area to press the seed into the mixture.

1964 Feed Grain Signup Started In Monroe County

STROUDSBURG — The sign-up for the 1964 feed grain program now is under way in the ASCS Monroe County office, Arlington W. Martin, chairman, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee announced yesterday. The sign-up period started Feb. 10 and will continue through March 27. The 1964 program will be more attractive to many producers than the 1963 program, North Viet Nam and South Viet Nam each is roughly the size of the state of Georgia. but basically the program will be about the same, the chairman explained. It will be available for the three feed grains corn, barley, and grain sorghum, and participation will be entirely voluntary, although price-support eligibility for the three crops will depend on such grower-participation. Applications to take part in the 1964 feed grain program may be filed in the Monroe County ASCS office from Mondays through Fridays at any time between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY RECORD

Question Box

By George Abraham
QUESTION OF THE WEEK — R. H. of Stroudsburg: "We have two dwarf apple trees, one a red Astrachan and the other a five-in - one kind. The Red astrachan bears only nubby, small fruit even though we spray. Should we pull up the tree and start-all over again? Also, on the five-variety tree we've only picked one variety. Both trees are 8 years old." Your dwarf red astrachan is "wild fruit", coming from the rootstock below. I'll explain how this happens from time to time. When dwarf apples are grown in the nursery, cuttings of the dwarfing stock (usually East Mailing IX) are planted in the nursery in the spring. Then, in August of that year a bud from the Red Astrachan (or any other variety) is budded into the stock just above the ground level. The following spring the stock is cut back to the bud and the bud is allowed to grow the new top. Then, the tree is ready for orchard planting either the second fall or second spring after budding. Now, sometimes the bud fails to grow and a wild shoot from the base makes the new top which produces "wild" or common fruit of no value whatever. A nursery doesn't sell an unbudded rootstock knowingly. A thing like this can get by and not be discovered until the tree begins to fruit. Suggestion: You can either dig up tree and replant, or you can graft it over to any variety and a good crop could be expected in a few years. As for the 5-variety apple tree, it often happens that the strongest growing varieties will outgrow the others and sometimes eventually take over the whole tree. B. G. of Kunkletown: "Please tell me how to grow a 'Youth and Old Age' begonia. I have a hard time growing it." The Calla begonia ("Youth and Old Age") is a finicky house plant, although a real queen if you can grow it. Leaves are blotched, some pure white, some with a touch of pink and shaped similar to the calla lily bloom. White leaves mean the plant lacks chlorophyll and thus is not too rugged. It prefers a west window, not direct sun (fatal). Overwatering is bad. Give it a cool window. If yours gets leggy, cut the tall white shoots back to the greenest leaves. Start new plants from cuttings rooted in sand. Cuttings of the short branches near the base of the plant give more compact plants than you'd get from the tips of the branches. N. L. of Nazareth: "I have a Calamondin orange which sets a lot of baby oranges. When the size of marbles the oranges drop. What makes this?" It could be due to improper pollination. Take a cat's tail or Camel's hair brush and pollinate each blossom. Male and female floral parts are on same plant, but not enough insects are around to affect pollination. Also, hot dry rooms and soils sometimes cause dropping of immature fruit. When the crop's heavy, expect a few to drop anyway. ELECTRICITY POWERS PROGRESS

Let's take a look at what electricity does for America!

Today, more than 90 per cent of our machinery is powered by electrical energy. At the turn of the century, industrial plants were powered by steam and water wheels.

Electrical horsepower gives the average American factory worker today the equal of 456 husky electrical helpers, almost twice as many as only 10 years ago.

In today's home the housewife has more servants than ever before.

Did you know that there are 166 electrical servants available for use in the home? Thanks to the low cost of these electrical servants at a cost of only a few cents each day.

For example, one penny will supply 24 minutes worth of electricity for a dishwasher . . . a penny will run a steam iron for an hour and an electric mixer for four hours.

It costs just about two cents a day to run a television set. As a matter of fact, the housewife can run all of her basic electrical appliances—about 25—for less than 43 cents a day.

In our communities, electricity works round the clock to provide better things.

Educational television enables teachers to extend their reach and make more effective use of their time.

Computer centers that serve an entire community are not unusual. Centers are used by cities for billing municipal services, by department stores for inventory control, by schools for keeping records, by civic officials for community planning projects, and by local industries for everything from product design to payroll and shipping records.

The electrical industry takes pride in its role in America's growth and progress. It also recognizes the responsibility that it has—responsibility to continue to improve, refine, and discover new ways to use this tremendous form of energy for the benefit of America and the world. To this end, the electrical industry will continue to devote its time, money, and talent.
